Excerpts from the Diary of Joe Mid

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." - Charles Dickens

Plebe Summer - June 30, 2000, Induction Day

It all began on June 30, 2000 with I-day, a day that will life in infamy for all time. After arriving with the sunrise, I began my lengthy indoctrination into my military future.

"The first and last words out of your mouth will be 'Sir', you understand?", the check-in detailer said while never releasing his penetrating stare into my eyes

"Huh?" I replied.

If I had been able to hear what the detailer said over the shouting around me, I would've realized I should have put a Sir sandwich on the "Huh". As I walked up the first set of stairs I pinned my new MID '04 nametag onto my shirt while trying to comprehend the next set of instructions.

"Your Alpha code is 040404, memorize it."

"Sir, yes Sir!"

With that, it all began, and a few hours later I had a bald head, sore feet, and three laundry bags filled with what must have been about two-thousand and four pounds of gear. I was given quick lessons on how to salute and make facing movements before being herded like a hairless cattle onto a bus. Each set of beady detailer eyes seemed to be watching my every move and glaring at me, but all I could think about was keeping the contents of my bladder where they belong. We were prodded off the bus to the courtyard of Mistcher where the long wait began. I must have stood there for an hour under the blazing sun and sweltering heat before a detailer finally told me to pick up my bags and follow him into the belly of the beast called Bancroft Hall.

I looked around my room to find my roommate already unpacked and sitting in his chair memorizing basic rates. Unlike me, he looked calm and prepared for what was to come. I looked towards my disheveled side of the room and found three intimidating boxes waiting to be properly stowed. Within a few seconds of my arrival I heard a shout for all of us to hit a bulkhead in the passageway. Without time to unpack, I ran out of my room and chopped along with the rest of my classmates to T-Court. Here, I first set my eyes on the Admiral who would become so affectionately known as "Suuuuuuuuuuupe". Following a bunch of long-winded speeches by assorted people and a fly over by navy jets, we were dismissed to say our final farewells to our friends and family before the six weeks of isolation. My parents barely recognized me with my baggy White Works and "deer in the headlights" expression. After a few short minutes of goodbyes, I met with the rest of my company between Michelson and Chauvenet. Moments later I was introduced to Fleet Admiral King and his hall, where I inhaled a plateful of lasagna. I quickly learned there were two options on the King Hall menu - take it or leave it. After eating I was whisked upstairs to the company area.

"I am 1/c Bossman, your company commander. My staff of 2/c Mean, 2/c Yellsalot, 2/c Bonecrusher and 2/c Nightmare will be your best buds over the next few weeks... "

Boy were they right... The next thing I knew I was on my feet and they were making me feel right at home. As I stood next to complete strangers getting yelled at by complete strangers, I realized that this was going to be a very long night.

Plebe Summer Training Day 4

The fourth grueling day brought a huge shock. Just as I thought I was getting used to my detailers, we wake up this morning to find completely new people yelling at us. Only this time they didn't tell us their names. We had to figure them out ourselves.

These newcomers also brought new training tools with them. Soon enough I was scrambling trying to get the "Qualifications of a Naval Officer" written 25 times before noon meal, or else I would get another 25 tacked on. My hand starts to hurt just thinking about it.

Plebe Summer Training Day 13

"Anyone who isn't confused really doesn't understand the situation." - Edward R. Murrow

After 12 days I now knew I was not dreaming. It was 0530 and I was half asleep standing in the passageway with my sheets in my pillowcase. At any other school people would've thought I was nuts, but the practice is standard here during Plebe Summer.

"Good morning everybody how are you? We're as happy as a monkey in a zoo. It's a bright and sunny day here at good old USNA. We've got lots to do so lets get to it."

"Make your racks, put on your Go-Fasters, and form up on Red Beach in five minutes for PEP."

As I carried out his orders, I wished that today would turn out to be one of those God-sent Black Flag days. The blissful paradise of a Black Flag meant I would spend hours coating every metal deck plate and doorframe with Brasso instead of the normal physical work. Unfortunately, today was not one of these special days. Today I enjoyed the pleasure of a five-mile run. Little did I know the horrors of rifle PT and massive boot runs still awaited me in the weeks to come. Upon returning to the hall there was more than enough time- almost 10 full minutes for my three roommates and I to shower and learn the massive numbers of daily rates. I heard from the hallway:

"5..4..1..You're done."

Today was our lucky day; we began with another boring brief. As we sat down we repeated the chant all too familiar to us all.

"Right hand right knee, left hand left knee, feet at a forty-five, Sir."

As usual I had no trouble falling asleep during the brief despite the chill of the air conditioning and the racket of the Plebe Hack death coughs. I woke up to hear bits and pieces of the Regimental Commander's speech about his expectations for us as Plebes. I must've started dozing off again because when I woke up, everybody seemed happy. The chaplains had arrived with their words of inspiration and best of all, their donuts. Maybe I was just starved but those donuts tasted like they were made in God's kitchen. Maybe the chaplains put a special donut blessing on them to help us through the never-ending summer. As the chaplains took our mind off of what was happening around us, I couldn't help thinking that this time of relaxation was only a temporary relief from the hell that awaited us in a few minutes.

"On your feet!"

It was now time to change into White Works Foxtrot for noon meal formation. I found myself again along the bulkhead screaming words that were supposed to be a chow call at the top of my lungs. By the time I was dismissed along with my classmates and ordered to make it to Tecumseh Court, the start of formation was only two minutes away. We somehow made it by moving with a serious sense of urgency. The blinding white of 1000 plebes in white works was like staring at the sun with a telescope. As I reached the table I found myself in the one position that all plebes dreaded- the hot seat. I led the squad in storing our covers, gear, and neckerchiefs. My squad received a momentary reprieve from the rants and raves of our detailer when the bell rang. I cringed as one of my squadmates was called to the anchor for losing his Reef Points. He would be spending the meal at the dreaded brigade tables with the Regimental Commander. My outcast squadmate was definitely sitting with the best and brightest.

"Squad, take...ssseats."

I then suffered through being asked every rate imaginable while serving food and drinks and opening the table for seconds and desert. I left the table after eating a few bits and rushed back to the room to change for yet another evolution.

Somehow the afternoon passed in a blur from drill, to almost drowning in the frozen pond known as Lejeune, to the wrecking session fondly known as company commander time. As the sweat poured down my face, I strained to hold my canteen out with one hand for what seemed like an eternity. Finally, I was allowed to rest my tired arms by holding my lightweight rifle instead.

All great days come to an end, and I sat in my room for a brief minute during my personal time writing my thought of the day before going to blue and gold. I took my thought and my care package out into the p-way and joined my squad on the bulkhead. Fatigued, blistered, and frustrated, I was looking forward to getting through this last harassment of the night before going to bed. All my pains seemed to disappear as I sang Blue and Gold with my lifelong friends for the next four years by the bay and beyond.

Plebe Year
Training Day 284

"Sir, you now have ten minutes..."

I shouted these words as quickly, loudly, and unintelligibly as I possibly could. The sooner I got this part done, the sooner I could go back to my room before my encore performance five minutes later. I had studied all my rates and read my articles this morning, but I knew there was always something they would ask me that would send me back to the feared "Shaft of Pain" where the hardest upperclass looked forward to making Plebes cry.

"Sir, you now have five minutes..."

I tried to do this one on just single breath. Midway I was stopped by one of the dreaded second class and asked a rate. Fortunately, I knew the answer and that satisfied him for now. This second class had the physical stature of someone who knows the weight room intimately. At the beginning of the year, my classmates and I were all scared of him based on his gargantuan size, but we later discovered he was a gentle giant.

When I finished my chow call, I chopped down to King Hall to get some breakfast. Initially, it was pretty easy to get lost in the sea of people and tables with nondescript blue metal chairs, but I found my way by counting the number of chandeliers between the door and my company area. When I finally reached my table, I rigged it for breakfast, not forgetting to take the plastic wrap off the cream cheese and place it on the glass of my favorite upperclass. Sometimes I would get the Youngsters because they were easy targets and generally thought it was entertaining, but today I figured I'd try to get my Firsties who were usually too experienced to fall for this amateur parlor trick. Once meal started, I threw food in my mouth and ate as much as I could. In between bites I dodged questions and rates thrown at me by my upperclass. After twenty minutes or so the bell at the anchor sounded my time to leave. I had escaped alive, another meal down.

I hurried back to my room to prepare for my morning classes, which included Calculus, Chemistry, an Government. Unfortunately, that combination of classes was sleep inducing and I knew for sure I would fall asleep this morning. I had stayed up until midnight cramming at my desk while my late lights chit guarded my door from upperclass intent on busting Plebes who stayed up late playing unauthorized video games or listening to music on their computers.

The afternoon passed just as quickly as the morning. By the time I completed my academic day, I still had some drilling on Warden to take up my time. It was one of those things here at the Academy that everyone hates, but has to do anyway. It was one of those traditions that would be permanent at this place. I guess the rest of my day will fall into the routine that I have become so accustomed to following just like every other day.

Within sight was the finish line. Sea Trails was scheduled for the day after classes end, followed closely by Herndon and graduation.

Youngster Year
Training Day 867

As I transitioned from pond scum into a full-fledged upperclass, I found myself in limbo as a youngster. With no job, no responsibility, and no purpose, I found myself blending into the shadow of obscurity. I felt more like a plebe as a youngster than I did as a plebe. The rules were still there and ways around them were tested. "Youngster bags" were and still are a favorite accessory while going out on liberty, for example.

Soon, after reform, I realized life at the Academy was not all fun and games as I watched videos on TV of planes hitting the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. On September 11th, all mids were locked in the hall with extra watch standers checking ID's at every entrance. The section of the Severn in front of the Academy was closed and patrolled by a small Coast Guard vessel and all planes were grounded. We all wondered what would happen next. Sadly, September 11th was the worst event this year; but it was only one of many heartaches that we faced. Our football team had a horrible year, losing not one, not two, but all ten games they played. We even racked up the largest point differential in Navy Football history when we lost 70-7 to Georgia Tech.

The first semester passed in a blur and I began to believe that maybe it was true what they said about the last three years seeming like only 1/3 of the time at the Academy. With the thought I was already more than 2/3rds done I pressed on into second semester.

What a way to come back. I somehow braved the freezing cold and passed another PRT, only four more to go I told myself afterwards. Along with the PRT came the blizzards. I found myself dodging snowballs on my way back from class. I watched my fellow midshipman slip and slide all over the place as FID forced us to class across iced walkways.

I finished the year with the youngster luau. Food, a band, and tropical shirts lifted my mood. The best part was that in a few days the stash of civvies that I had retrieved my tropical shirt from would mysteriously appear; just like the music and movies of plebe year.

All in all, this year seemed pretty uneventful, and I was still left with the question, should I sign those papers...?

Second Class Year
Training Day 1056

The light at the end of the tunnel was now visible. I had signed, and it was definitely worth it. I returned from my cruise abroad. The Supe was in the process of making the Academy world class, but he had already done so with summer cruises. As a class we traveled the world, going to Spain on Submarines, Japan on Surface cruises, or Australia on a foreign exchange cruise.

The rigors of Academy life pressed on, however the year seemed to fly by. I slid right into the new duty section watch structure, just glad that I was now in the company ACDO role. As Assistant Company Duty Officer I spent my time attempting to shirk all the responsibilities the First Class seemed so eager to "delegate." I took a step back and laughed at the new plebes and youngsters who would endure the torturous task of Company Mate of the Deck, or CMOD. I also shed a tear that I would never have the chance to stand the ever so important RDO, or Regimental Duty Officer.

The civies and Tuesday night liberty at Griffins seemd to help ease my transition to second class status quite a bit. I finally knew what the "Taco-Tuesday" excitement was. Bancroft Hall no longer had any old wings. As a class, we celebrated our momentous commitment with a two-beer limit at our 2-4-7 tailgaters were the best thing about the football season that did not see many wins.

My higher paycheck was put to good use on gas, oil, and tune-ups to get and keep my car in some kind of working condition. This was important because now I could travel anywhere I wanted on my five weekends. Washington, Baltimore, New York, and even as far as Florida, my friends and I traveled the country gaining "worldly experience" we would need to lead the brigade in the fast approaching Firstie year.

I put the second diagonal stripe to use in training the class of '06, yet another even year class going through the rigors of plebe year. All I know is that when the next even year class arrives, I will have graduated. Aught Six begged us for mercy, but we were unrelenting, just as our trainers were on us.

This year all the bonuses seemed to be coming my way. Who could pass up free eye surgery or $25,000 at one percent?

The only thing I needed now was a date to Ring Dance. If only the Academy issued dates as a free gift along with the class ring, just like the incentives on the TV infomercials. I ended up with a perfect date on a perfect night. I enjoyed a surprisingly good dinner with a table of my closest friends followed by dancing to the Electric Brigade inside Dahlgren hall.

When the hats went up in the air at graduation I placed the horizontal stripes on my shoulders and felt on top of the world. In 364 days my hat would be sailing towards the heavens, and my classmates and I would become Alumni!

Firstie Year
Training Day 1423

I came, I saw, I conquered. I sit under the blazing sun in my choker whites surrounded by my closest friends for the past for year and I wonder where the time went. It seemed like just yesterday I came back as a Firstie to discover all the changes and surprises that were in store for me...

I came back to school with another increased paycheck! $400 a month was a nice increase. The bad news was that my paycheck was being reduced due to my huge debt to the USNA store. I always found it strange that the people who bought speakers and all kinds of computer gear plebe year always got flex pay, whereas I bought textbooks and owe an arm and a leg. I enjoyed liberty every day except Wednesday, which allowed me to increase my knowledge of imported and domestic brews. Wednesday nights were spent in the O-club after mandatory meal and briefs being entertained by drunken classmates with $5.50 pitchers.

If one thing is for sure, First Class parking privileges prepared me for whatever branch of the Navy I chose. Driving on the yard prepared me for SWOdom by allowing me to drive from my room to Hospital Point when I had an appointment, or for submarines as I tactically avoided the Jimmy Legs, and even for the Marine Corps by requiring me to spring back to my room for taps after parking in the only open spot one mile from the Hall.

Firstie year provided some of the best memories of our time at Canoe U. Firstie Parents Weekend not only brought our family and friends to the Academy, but something named Isabel that would give the town of Annapolis a run for its money. Hurricane Isabel arrived just in time to cancel all of the activities for parents weekend except the football game, and provided numerous opportunities for midshipmen working parties to clean the yard! It was quite interesting to wake up, look out the window into the midstore parking lot and see kayaks instead of cars roaming the streets. The only cars in site were submerged in about 6 feet of water. All in all, the weekend turned out ok, even though many parents were not able to make it due to the weather.

Service selection arrived before we could blink twice. Service selection found me celebrating with all my friends. We partied as we chose our flight dates, ship assignments, and respective school dates. Each specialty prided themselves on individualized traditions as preparation for graduation. Marines shaved eachothers heads down to the scalp while Nukes, done with the stressful interviews, were now spending their bonuses. Aviators were given the chance to log hours in civilian aircraft and ground school. SWOs ate their donuts and broke out the mo-boards for review, and the spec-ops/spec-warriors continued their crazy habits.

I passed each day finishing up the required classes, with each test calculating what grade I needed to pass the course. Naval Law, EE II, and my practicum managed to occupy my attention for fleeting moments.

A few months later I find myself inside the stadium, waiting to put on my new shoulder boards and make my mission complete. I can't help but realize that I would never again have the responsibilities, privileges, and power I had as a Firstie until I become an Admiral. What an amazing trip it has been, and as I look at my friends and see all the good times we had together, I realize that time will never let my memories fade.

"Three cheers to those we leave behind...Hip Hip Hooray..."

What Has Changed
1845-2004

The grounds of the United States Naval Academy, with their granite buildings and pristine landscape dotted with ornate monuments seems more than the 'historic campus' that numerous travel brochures point it out as, it is older than the oldest maple tree, rooted deep into the earth of Annapolis drawing life from it's waters and giving shelter to it's people. At least, this is how it seems. Amidst the seeming constant reconstruction in the aftermath of tropical storm Isabel, the USNA stands strong; its face has not changed, and to its inhabitants, it never has.

However, a quick look into written history reveals that the grounds that support the United States Naval Academy have changed as much as the midshipmen who have stepped through its doors for the last 150+ years. As a matter of fact, if ghosts from as recently as the early 1900s were to visit the grounds, the only thing they would recognize were a few monuments and the two gates houses by gate 3.

The grandiose project of establishing a naval foothold in Annapolis actually began before the founding of the Academy. In the 1820's, Navy wanted a depot and hospital in Annapolis. They had their eyes on St. Johns, but no one in a political position could find the authority to give it to them. Ironically, St. John's was the first school to teach military science (aka ROTC). By 1870, the Johnnies were wearing uniforms. The theme of the U.S. Navy trying to take over St. Johns is not isolated to this instance either, but that is later in history.

It is well know that in 1845, with the help of the Secretary of the Navy, John Bancroft, and a young visionary who touted the importance of steam, Chauvenet, the War Department gave to the U.S. Navy 9 acres of land in Annapolis, where the Severn joined the Chesapeake to establish the first Naval Academy. Windmill Point and Fort Severn consisted of five houses for midshipmen and faculty: the Superintendent's Quarters, Brandywine Cottage, named so after the frigate, Apollo Row, named for the god-like qualities of its inhabitants, Rowdy Row, inherently self-explanatory, Faculty Quarters, the Gas House, after the loquaciousness of its inmates, and The Abbey. The Abbey was located along the northwest wall and had the reputation of housing midshipmen who were the example of regulation…regular 'Joe's." That reputation was shattered one day when the Officer of the Day visited The Abbey only to discover that its inhabitants were perfectly peaceful because they weren't there; there was a tunnel leading from the Abbey into Downtown. Needless to say, The Abbey was then vacated and its population moved in with another house.

From June to October, repairs and improvements were made to the Naval School in Annapolis, specifically to the Dining Hall, the dorms, and chaplain quarters. The hospital foundation was also laid. On October 10th, the first Superintendent, CDR Franklin Buchanan, assembled the midshipmen and professors and read the letter from the Secretary of the Navy authorizing the opening of the school and declared the first day of classes. Both classes, the Youngster, or those who had not been to sea, and the Oldsters were obviously ecstatic.

Within the next year, the hospital was completed, Nicholson, Buchanan, and O'Hara Houses purchased for faculty housing, and the Mess/Library/Lyceum building erected for an assembly area.

Five years after the first day of classes, midshipmen were still ecstatic about going to school, and the Naval School in Annapolis was officially renamed the United States Naval Academy. The XO became the Commandant, a uniform for all midshipmen was made mandatory, and a practice ship introduced to the Yard. The format of the schooling also changed into what we are familiar with 154 years later. Midshipmen were graded on a 4.0 scale of the course of four years with summer cruises in between, and appointments had to come from members of the House of Representatives instead of from family of friends of the Navy Department.

In 1853, Superintendent Stribling added the land on which the Chapel, Officers Club, and Administration Building now sit. At that time, it was used for officer's quarters and called Blake Row and accommodated five three-story apartment duplexes and the Commandants Quarters. Stribling Row was also constructed, five two-story brick dormitories adding a total of 98 room. From then until 1861, the Yard was constantly being improved. Recitation Hall, the three-story classroom building was added as well as a new Chapel with a Greek revival, Ionic tetrahedral plan. Probably the only addition that could be recognized today is the donation of the Japanese Bell, presented by the widow of Commodore Matthew C. Perry in March, 1858, at the time of his death. The bell now sits in Tecumseh Court.

What Has Changed
1845-2004

In 1859, the fame of the Naval Academy was becoming apparent. Captains began choosing Academy men over merchant marine officers and there were so many midshipmen attending, the fourth class were quartered aboard the practice ship, the Plymouth, due to rooming shortages. That superfluity didn't last long. After the outbreak of the Civil War, the midshipmen not involved, and there were few, went to Newport RI, to Fort Adams. But, the Army fort had been abandoned for years and was in disarray. The grounds of the fort were still used for drill, but the upperclass (those who were left) stayed in the Atlantic Hotel and the plebes, the biggest class yet, 200 total, stayed aboard the USS Constitution. While they were gone, the USNA grounds were being destroyed by soldiers. Any available buildings were used as hospitals, the Sups house was a billiards parlor, and there were horse ruts and beer sheds everywhere.

When the midshipmen returned The Sup, Porter, was obviously upset with the condition of the Academy. The conditions of St. John's grounds weren't much better. As a matter of fact, they quite resembled the grounds of the Academy; so much so, that Admiral Porter tried to quietly expand the Academy by usurping the grounds of the college, only to be politely told, "Sir, that's not our school." He instead rebuilt the Naval Academy; it became an era known as the Admiral David Dixon Porter Period, or Post Civil War Period.

During this era, a total of 144 acres were purchased in five different periods and generally, nothing was left unchanged. The first was the Maryland Governor's Mansion and grounds, which became a library and the Superintendent's office. In 1866, the undercurrent imaginings of the administration were teased by the purchase of 6 acres from St. Johns along College Creek. Strawberry Hill, was also purchased and now houses the final resting place of many of our bravest sailors and soldiers who are overlooked by the Hospital we know today.

Admiral Porter even changed the physical welfare of the midshipmen, instating baseball, boxing, and rowing. Fort Severn was transformed into a gymnasium and dances were held weekly in the Lyceum. Small ships were also purchased for weekend recreation. Also added were a natatorium, laundry, armory, bakery, Marine barracks, Marine Officers' Quarters, and a gatehouse at Maryland Avenue. That gatehouse is the only building that survives today.

Porter also instituted in midshipmen a few qualities which still survive today. He lay them solely on their honor and trusted them to remain there, a trait that midshipmen are still proud of. Under his care, the class of 1869 also has the bragging rights of being the first class to have a "class ring." Midshipmen prided themselves on their school and their talents and conduct; qualities that still endure today.

When Commodore Worden took over as Superintendent in 1869, he found little to change; there was also significantly less money available to the Academy from Congress. Commodore Worden enjoyed "pomp and ceremony" immensely, and it's not surprising that the current parade field bearing his name was purchased during his reign. It was also under him that "star" men were born, midshipmen with a 3.4 or above. Those men were given the privilege of standing in front of their classmates when graduating and being recognized. Today we still have those select few who wear Sups stars to indicate their incredible performance in all fields.

Unfortunately, under Commodore Worden, another "tradition" was born: hazing. In 1871, the incoming class felt the roughness of their upperclass' handling, and despite the complaints of family, friends, and Congressmen, those subject to the treatment carried it on to those after then, eventually resulting in a "Hazing Law" passed by legislators that prescribed a court-martial for any and every hazing offense. The law was of little effect, and the midshipmen eventually corrected themselves, and the law taken off the books and forgotten ten years later.

What Has Changed
1845-2004

The Naval Academy was in a period of unpopularity between the years of 1882 and 1898. Midshipmen were reduced in rank by a law from any officer status that they held to naval cadet. That same law, however, delineated that Marine Corps officers would come from the Academy. The addition of Captain Ramsay, a practical man, brought with it practical drills and a change in the structure of the cadets. In 1895, the board of visitors found the Academy in bad shape. During their absence, the light bulb had been created, and was wanted throughout the buildings. Cadets were also getting very sick, the cause of which was found to be the blood that ran through the yard from a slaughterhouse on College Ave. Thus, the Flagg plan was born through the Matthews Board that came to the same conclusion as the board of visitors. But, they had to wait for the money. All that Captain Ramsay accomplished during his stay with respect to the yard was to demolish the Superintendents House, which has stood since 1790.

A member of the board, Mr. Ernest Flagg, and architect from New York, drew up complete plans for the new Naval Academy, and on March 29,1899, Congress approved the plan and appropriated one million dollars to the plan.

Buildings were torn down one by one, and acres of land sprung up just as quickly. Landfill created 43 acres along all waterfronts and the south shore of College Creek. On those grounds stands many of the sports fields, as well as numerous building we now are familiar with: Dahlgren, Mitcher. 7th and 8th wings, the Visitors Center, and Luce to name a few.

Dahlgren Hall was completed in 1903, and the class of 1903 held its graduation in February in the Hall before its dedication in March. It was then used as an armory. The Flagg plan also included a large dormitory designed to hold all midshipmen. The central portion, as well as the first and second wings of Bancroft Hall were built, along with Macdounough Hall, Halligan Hall (first used as Marine Barracks), Isherwood Hall (Marine Engineering), the Officer's Club, the Superintendent's Quarters, an Administration Building, the Hospital, Mahan, Maury, and Sampson, Officer's Quarters, a power plant and the Chapel.

The Chapel was completed in 1908 in the form of a Greek cross, with the familiar bronze doors, donated by Robert Means Thompson in memory of the class of 1868 and magnificent stain glass windows memorializing the first three admirals, Porter, Dewey, and Farragut, as well as the newly commissioned Ensign and Sir Galahad. Later, in order to accommodate the growing Brigade, an addition was added to the Chapel, changing the floor plan from a Greek cross to a Christian one. During this time, a votive ship model was also donated to the Chapel and still hangs there today. A votive ship is a representation from the earliest days of sailing when men connected the sea and ship with an unknown deity who looked out for "They that go down to the sea in ships." This was, and most likely still is the only votive ship in the western hemisphere.

Until this point, the Fort Severn had remained as a sentiment. However, there was no room for sentiments in the Flagg Plan. 1909 Fort Severn, the last remnant of the old grounds, was destroyed.

To hold all these buildings, 40 more acres were purchased in 3 pieces. Later, in 1902-1906, a 3rd and 4th wing were added to Bancroft. Throughout the years, building after building was added to the plan, and renovation after renovation completed. Medical Officer's Quarters were created, as well as the Chapel Crypt, 5th and 6th wings, Griffin Hall, Luce Hall, the Zimmerman Bandstand, Norman Scott Natatorium, Hubbard Boat House, Thompson Stadium, which was constructed from steel taken from battleships scrapped by the Five-power Armament treaty of 1922, the Perry Circle Apartments, Leahy Hall, Preble Hall, the Chapel Nave, Ward Hall, and the Mess Hall. In 1982, Melville Hall and the Stadium were razed.

With the construction of MacDonough Hall came the introduction of a tradition still implemented today: Ring Dance. In actuality, the necessity for a new ceremony was made known after a misfortune tied to the old tradition. Second Class, after purchasing their rings, would have to set them aside in their rooms until their final exam in navigation that year, after which, the First Class would brusquely drag the Second Class out of the academic building and throw them into Severn in Dewey Basin. In 1924, the unfortunate death of a midshipman during this observance cause a new dance to be held the next year in place of the old ceremony, where Second Class walked through a massive golden ring with the lady of their fancy and dipped their ring in waters from the Atlantic, Pacific, and Caribbean, sealing the ceremony with a kiss.

What Has Changed

During late WWII, the government once again had elaborate plans to take over St. John's. Bancroft Hall in its monstrosity is tiny compared to what they had in mind. Once again, gentlemen, it's not our school.

Ironically, despite their intentions to expand, after WWII, there was debate focusing on the necessity of the service academies. Could they be made one? Could ROTC be enough? The answer came from Admiral Holloway, who was later to become Superintendent. Enough distinguished graduates had come from West Point and the USNA that a third school was needed to support the recently created Air Force. Until stable, both services sent 25% of their graduates into the Air Force

The Cold War brought on another period of construction for the Naval Academy. From 1955 to 1991, Dewey and Farragut fields were created, and land claimed from Spa Creek and College Creek for a field house and a new library.

Created were Halsey Field House, and addition to the Mess Hall, which was dedicated as King Hall in 1981, the Navy Marine Corps Stadium, 7th and 8th wings, Mitscher Hall, Ricketts, Chauvenet and Michelson, Nimitz, the Robert Crown Sailing Center, Rickover, Lejeune, the Obervatory, and finally, in 1991, Alumni Hall.

Since then, we have seen the addition of the Armel-Leftwich Visitors Center, Bishop Stadium, a new fire station, Beach Hall, and the Glenn Warner Soccer Facility. Where are we going next? The country is now in he midst of a new kind of war, a self-proclaimed war on terrorism. Undoubtedly, the Naval Academy will experience the same fame and popularity it has throughout history. No one can say where the history of the Naval Academy is going, but one thing is for sure, when we come back in 10 years, 20 year, maybe 50 years, much will have changed. But, one thing will remain true: 2004 had the LAST REAL PLEBE YEAR.

CONTROVERSY

The NAAA owns one of the last wooded areas in Annapolis on Roe Blvd. They wanted to tear it down and build a "Navy Hotel" much like West Point's hotel. Historians and environmentalists stopped that quickly.

In the late 50's, Ben Morell, the father of the Seabees, discussed evening the wall on King George St, giving the USNA all the land currently in between. Unfortunately for the Navy, there are many historic houses on that land, and the perimeter remains. A veritable peace conference between the townspeople and the Navy had to be held to patch relations after the debate.

The land on Greenbury Pt. was given to the Sup a few years ago, and the radio towers were going to be torn down and NAPS moved from RI to the Naval Station. However, the locals decided they could not navigate without the towers, so the Sup left 3. However, he still owns the land and could at any moment erect a new building.

Aerospace Engineering

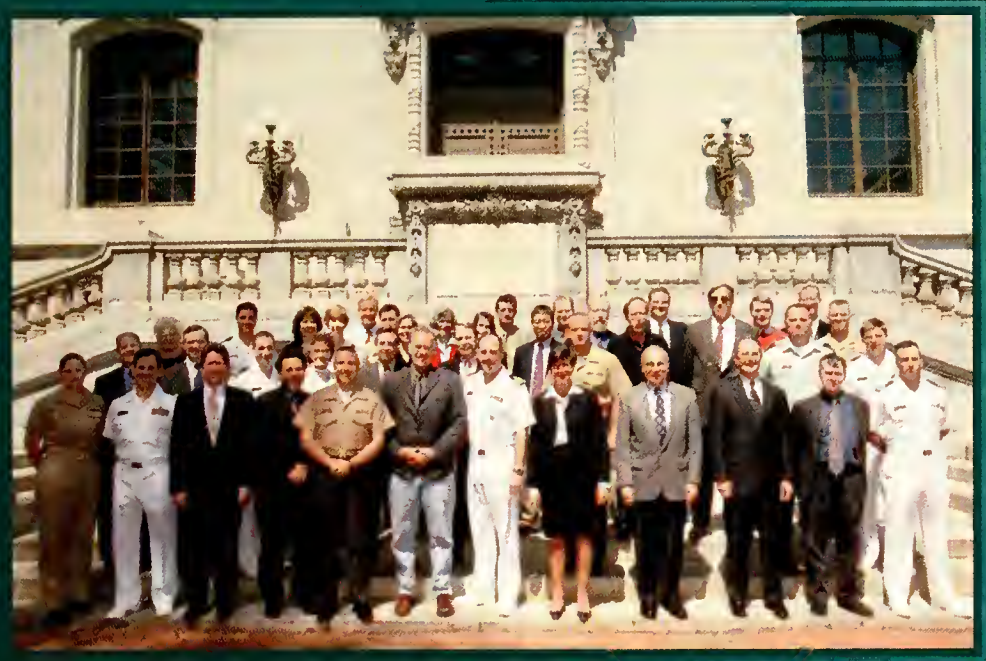
The Aerospace Engineering Department offers one of the most exciting and challenging academic programs at the Naval Academy. The program is structured to produce naval officers who will meet the challenges of serving in such areas as naval aviation, naval research, and the Naval Space Command. The Aerospace Department offers two specific tracks of study in Aeronautics and Astronautics. Before the students endure the rigors of their track courses, they are immersed in "core curriculum" courses that establish a firm understanding in the fundamentals of engineering. The core curriculum covers such subjects as chemistry, physics, mathematics, engineering mechanics, thermodynamics, and electrical engineering. Aeronautics students will study topics such as aerodynamics, structures, propulsion, and flight vehicle performance. Astronautics students will focus their studies on such topics as the space environment, astrodynamics, spacecraft systems, and spacecraft attitude dynamics and control. Both tracks conclude with a design course, which allows midshipmen to apply their engineering knowledge to the design of an aero or space flight vehicle. The design course represents the culmination of four years of study in the aerospace engineering discipline.

Chemistry

The Chemistry major at the Naval Academy provides midshipmen with training in [illegible] the discipline's traditional field, leading to [illegible] Bachelor of Science degree. The Chemistry Department has one of the finest undergraduate chemistry laboratories in the nation. Skilled technicians maintain the laboratories, assist the faculty and help midshipmen solve practical problems in the lab.

The faculty have a wealth of experience, not only in their academic understanding of chemistry but also in the practical application of chemistry in the Navy and Marine Corps. Chemistry majors will find that their civilian and military instructors can make the study of chemistry a highlight of their learning experience at the Naval Academy.

History



The History Department of the United States Naval Academy offers a wide variety of courses in many different areas of American, European, and world history. Each year approximately 90 midshipmen graduate from the Naval Academy with a Bachelor of Science degree in History.

In addition to the standard major, there is a special honors major in which selected students may participate.

The faculty of the History Department includes specialists in many areas of history. There are 28 civilian and 17 military faculty members that represent the department.

Economics

The Economics Department helps prepare Naval Officers in the most fundamental lessons of resource scarcity relative to potential uses - thinking Economically. The Economics program provides understanding of the economic institutions and economic systems each officer is pledged to defend. The department also seeks to provide knowledge of world resource endowments, industrial patterns, trade flows, and the nature and the interdependency of the world's diverse economic systems in order to provide a useful background in dealing with the citizens and representatives of other countries that U.S. officers will inevitably encounter. The department also seeks to provide a major that provides a strong set of mid-career skills, in particular, for the midshipman who may attend service schools such as the Naval War College, staff billet assignments, postgraduate training in management, national security and intelligence, and future subspecialty designations in management and politico-military or strategic planning.

Electrical Engineering

Electrical and Computer Engineering is a cornerstone discipline that will shape the Navy and Marine Corps well into the future. The major offers a solid grounding in the fundamental concepts of Electrical Engineering with opportunities to specialize in Digital Computer Systems, Communications Systems, Microwave Systems, and Solid State Design. The Navy needs engineers educated in these concepts to lead the development of the Integrated Electric Drive System for ships and microelectronics; the foundation of all future electronic systems.

ECE students actively pursue application of classroom concepts in the laboratory. The department has extensive laboratories in fiber optics, microwave theory with radar applications, design and development of solid-state devices (transistors), digital and analog communications, integration of digital hardware and software, electro-mechanical energy conversion and electrical engineering design. The Electrical and Computer Engineering Department is constantly updating all laboratories with leading edge technology.

English

The English Department offers a wide array of courses: dmishipmen study everything from Homer to Hamlet, from Marlowe to Morrison, from Dickens to Dickinson. The English Department has a mix of 23 civilians and ten officers currently teaching. Two hundred seven majors in the department will graduate with a BS degree. The department offers an honors majory as well as opportunities for independent study or graduate study at local universities.

Computer Science / Information Tech

In the rapidly changing field of computer technology, the nationally accredited USNA Computer Science Department is dedicated to remaining on the leading edge. The computer science major is a common and vital component of the Naval Academy's academic program. The computer science major equips naval officers with the skills necessary to serve in today's hi-tech naval forces while shaping the naval forces of tomorrow.

The Computer Science Department is accredited by the Computing Accreditation Commission of ABET and offers a major in Computer Science leading to a Bachelor of Science degree. The department has approximately 200 majors and a faculty of 15. Faculty and Students have access to outstanding office and lab facilities including networked PCs and Suns.

Beginning with the class of 2005, the Computer Science Department also offers a new major in Information Technology (IT). This major also leads to a Bachelor of Science degree.

The department's mission is to serve the Navy and Marine Corps through excellence in Computer Science education and research. The faculty strive to provide a strong, dynamic, nationally recognized and accredited Computer Science program providing state of the art education and research opportunities focused on computer science concepts and technologies critical to the Naval services in the 21st century.

Language Studies

The Language Studies Department offers courses through the fourth-year college level in Mandarin Chinese, French, German, Japanese, Russian, and Spanish.

First and second year courses help midshipmen acquire proficiency in listening, speaking, reading, and writing the language of their choice. Third-year courses continue building the language proficiency while introducing midshipmen to the culture and literature of the language area. Fourth-year courses presuppose linguistic competence and concentrate on more specialized topics in the history, contemporary society, and literature of the countries where the language is spoken. At all levels, classes are conducted and written work is done in the target language. Acquisition of language and culture is supported extensively by technologies like video and computer based multimedia wherever appropriate.

Leadership, Ethics&Law

The Department of Leadership, Ethics, and Law helps to mold midshipmen into future Naval and Marine Corps Officers. Courses offered include Leadership and Human Behavior, Leadership Theory and Application, Naval Law, Moral Reasoning for Naval Leaders, and Psychology. The department aims to provide graduates with the ethical and behavioral foundations that our nation's military demands in its leaders. Through discussion, debate, and analytical thinking, midshipmen are able to confront both theoretical and real world scenarios that they may encounter while serving as officers in the Naval Service. By confronting what past and present officers have done in "tough" situations, midshipmen gain valuable insight into what they might do when confronted with similar situations. Midshipmen will later build on the leadership and moral foundations that were gained in the LEL department as graduates in the Naval Service.

Mathematics

The Mathematics Major teaches midshipmen to think logically and critically; these fundamental abilities are valuable to the naval officer. Mathematics plays a central role in virtually every technical and scientific field and is crucial in modern, accurate models of the environment. Mathematics provides training in analyzing problems, formulating methods of attack, and expressing results in a clear and logical manner. These same skills are applied aboard ship or submarine, inside a fighter jet, and in all military communities.

All Mathematics majors take required courses beyond the three semesters of calculus taken by all midshipmen. These courses provide a common language that is used in subsequent elective courses in pure and applied mathematics and in operations research.

Mechanical Engineering

The overall curriculum of the Mechanical Engineering department supports the moral and mental preparation of midshipmen providing them with the skills and knowledge they will need to be successful as junior officers in the United States Navy and Marine Corps.

The Mechanical Engineering program supports the Academy's mission by providing midshipmen with a broad education in mechanical engineering sciences and a knowledge of fundamental engineering principles that enhance their ability to understand and design naval systems and to supervise the operation of these systems. The Mechanical Engineering Department strives to maintain faculty, curriculum and supporting facilities, which facilitates excellence in undergraduate teaching.

The department takes seriously the need to develop in its graduates a sound understanding of the design process and its importance in the success of engineering activity through a series of four sequential courses, considered the design backbone. Other courses that are primarily oriented towards the analysis of engineering science provide direct support to the design backbone.

Naval Architecture & Ocean Engineering

Tommorw's Navy must operate on, below, and just above the surface of the sea utilizing a variety of ships, submarines, deep submergence vehicles and diving equipment while performing a multitude of missions in defense, research, exploration and exploitation of earth's last frontier - its oceans. The essential ingredient to the success of all these missions is Man. to develop naval officers capable of performing effectively in this complex environment is the goal of the Naval Architecture and Ocean Engineering Department (NA&OE).

In endeavoring to prepare officers to meet the Navy's present and future needs, the Department offers ABET accredited degrees in Naval Architecture and Ocean Engineering - each an interdisciplinary field involving the application of engineering principles relating to the ocean environment. These marine-oriented programs of study are supported by the latest in facilities at the Academy and are taught by an experienced staff of dedicated professional faculty. All these studies have direct carry over to careers in the Naval Service. The knowledge of basic engineering principles, their practical application and the research and design insights provided through these majors offer a well-balanced preparation for the ready assimilation of young officers into the fleet as well as a basis for postgraduate studies.

Oceanography

An interdisciplinary science major, oceanographyinvolves the study of meteorology, geophysics, physics, chemistry, biology and geology as they relate to the ocean environment. Basic courses in these areas are prerequisites for more advanced oceanography and meteorology courses, such as sound propagation in the ocean, the study of waves and tides, and the use of satellites in oceanography. Other courses include biological oceanography, which offers a glimpse of the production of marine plants and animals; synoptic meteorology, which involves hands-on weather forecasting experience using the latest tools available; and advanced mathematics, which are necessary to describe the complex behavior of fluid environments.

The civilian and military faculty members have backgrounds in disciplines ranging from dynamic meteorology to marine biology, geology, and oceanography. Their research is at the forefront of modern science, applying the most recent technological advances in satellites and computational technology. Researchers' interests cover topics as diverse as mathematical modeling of the Chesapeake Bay and explosive development of storms. The military faculty brings fleet experiences into the classroom and provides mishipmen with real world examples of how meteorologyo and oceanography affect different warfare specialties.

Physics

The major program in physics presents fundamental physical concepts and principles in such a way as to emphasize their general usefulness and lays a strong foundation for further work in a broad range of technical fields. The challenge of physics lies in uniting its laws and generalizations, expressed through algebra, trigonometry, and calculus, with the integrative reasoning so essential in solving new problems. A bachelor of science degree is awarded.

Some of the topics treated in the sequence of courses are the origin, propagation, and reception of waves of all kinds; field concepts; theory of relativity; basic theory of quantum mechanics; and statistical mechanics. All are studied with the object of developing an open-minded and creative approach to the physical world -- an approach increasingly important to those who will be leaders in the modern Navy. The physics major is particularly suitable for those midshipmen entering the nuclear power program, but many recent physics majors have opted for Navy air, surface line, and Marine Corps as well. Advanced degrees are available to qualified physics majors prior to graduation, immediately after graduation, and later in their careers.

Political Science

The Political Science department offers the full range of political science courses plus a number of uncommon offerings that deal with the ethics of war and Civil-Military relations. The department offers a full range of courses on American political institutions and processes and those dealing in international relations and comparartive government.

The normal faculty complement includes civilian professors and military officers. The civilian professors comprise the permanent faculty, providing stability and academic expertise the program and maintain an extensive record of publication, professional society involvement and consulting. Military officers come to the department after receiving their Master's degree and generally teach for three years within the area of their expertise. "Permanent Military Professors" have been introduced into the faculty, combining the best of academic and professional worlds.

The department also sponsors a number of extracurricular activities such as an active Model United Nations Club (MUN), the Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference (NAFAC) and a chapter of the National Political Science honor society, Pi Sigma Alpha.

Professional Programs

The Department of Professional Programs performs three primary functions: administration of the summer training programs, assignment of graduating midshipmen to Navy and Marine Corps communities, and management of Technical Programs in Luce Hall. This includes providing technical support for the Luce Hall Local Area Network, Fleet Command warfare simulators, Luce Hall Planetarium, and the electronic classrooms in Luce Hall.

Summer Training for midshipmen takes them all around the world, to Navy and Marine Corps installations, ships, and submarines in oceans and ports from San Diego to the western Pacific, from Norfolk to the Mediterranean, and special schools both in the United States and overseas. The Department of Professional Programs ensures that each midshipman has valuable opportunities to gain fleet experience before graduating from the Naval Academy. Graduates rely on the department for their first assignment as Navy and Marine Corps officers.

Seamanship & Navigation

The Seamanship and Navigation Department is the largest department within the Division of Professional Development. The Department's curriculum provides a foundation in basic marine engineering, seamanship, ship handling, ship operations, and tactics. The core curriculum spans the midshipman's entire four years at the Naval Academy and is designed to provide them with a broad based of knowledge, enhanced by practical summer training.

The Seamanship and Navigation Department is also responsible for all Naval Academy related employment of the Yard Patrol Craft stationed at Naval Station Annapolis. These YP's are used extensively in the core courses and provide an excellent means for practical hands-on experience. The YP's are also used for the Atlantic Professional Afloat Training for Midshipmen (LANTPATRAMID) a summer training program sponsored by Seamanship and Navigation.

Weapons & Systems Engineering

Systems Engineering is an interdisciplinary major whose primary objective is to provide an overall understanding of the analysis and design of complex engineering systems. This is accomplished through the study of such topics as electronics, mechanics, and computer engineering. The emphasis is on the mathematical modeling, analysis, synthesis, and control of such systems and on their simulation using the department's extensive computing facilities.

For naval officers, the Systems Engineering major is of significant value to the professional whose career will be continually involved with the operation and maintenance of sophisticated, integrated systems.

The Gorman Report has rated the Systems Engineering major at the Naval Academy number one in the nation for over fifteen consecutive years.

Nimitz Library

The Nimitz Library, completed in 1973, is named in honor of Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, USN (1885-1966). A 1905 graduate of the United States Naval Academy, Admiral Nimitz served as Commander-in-Chief, Pacific, during World War II.

The Nimitz Library offers comprehensive library services to midshipmen and faculty. Service is also provided to USNA military and civilian staff, to personnel attached to the other activites of the Annapolis Area Naval Complex, and to local retired faculty members and retired military personnel. Other residents of the Annapolis community and authorized researchers may make use of the Library's resources under specific circumstances.

First Class Summer Cruise

Final Preparation for the Fleet

First Class Cruise offers the senior most members of the brigade their final look at the fleet before venturing out into exciting new careers in the Navy and Marine Corps. Summer Training serves an extremely important purpose in the lives of Midshipmen, as it gives a taste of different career paths in the Fleet. First Class Cruise is generally the most hands on and exciting summer as far as Midshipmen training goes. Rising First Class make their summer training preferences toward the end of Second Class year. Options include a myriad of exciting and challenging opportunities, including but not limited to: Plebe Summer Detail, Leatherneck, Mini BUD/s, Aviation Cruises, Surface Cruises, Submarine Cruises, YP's, CSNTS, Internships and more. First Class Mids are sent all over the world for summer cruises, which could include such exciting opportunities as a month with an F/A-18 squadron, a cruise under the sea on a SSBN Balistic Missile Submarine, a cruise in the Pacific on a Guided Missile Cruiser, a grueling month with the SEALs at Mini BUD/s, or many other exciting cruise opportunities. During these cruises, Firsties are assigned Junior Officer summer tasks. These JO's, who are typically only 1-2 years into the Fleet, give Firsties a first-hand look at what to expect as a Junior Officer. Another bonus to cruise is that Firsties enjoy liberty in all locations in the world. Firsties can be seen on the beaches of Hawaii and San Diego basking in the sun or living it up in Europe. The First Class Cruise is truly one of the most valuable experiences of a Midshipman's career, as they they are afforded an opportunity to meet and interact with sailors and soldiers all over the world.

Summer Training
Leatherneck

Below: Trying not to get a taste of Quigley water

Leatherneck is the period of time every summer when rising Firsties discover who really wants to be a Marine and who just thinks they do. Many Mids had no idea what they had gotten themselves into when they agreed to spend a month in Quantico. From Day One and the first of many mornings that began before 0430, these motivated midshipmen spent their days learning warfare tactics and testing their stamina and abilities during evolutions on the Endurance Course, Obstacle Course, Confidence Course, Leadership Reaction Course and Combat Conditioning Course. Thanks to the endless days and nights spent in the rain on field exercises, the midshipmen in each Leatherneck blocks were bonded closer than they had been since Plebe Summer. Those who were lucky enough to [illegible] The Quigley will never forget it and probably smelled [illegible] weeks. Highlights of the Leatherneck experience include going to the range and getting to fire more [illegible] than [illegible] hitching a ride on a CH-53, and the prom at the end [illegible] LTs act like human beings for the first time. Second Class Cruise

Finally getting to the Fleet

Second Class Cruise

As the year wound down, the Class of 2005 awaited their cruise assignments. Because of world events and ever changing deployment schedules, cruise locations and dates changed for some Mids even as finals and intercessionals were going on. Firstie's covers fly and the newly mined Second Class are ready to hit the fleet. Though everyone may not have been happy with where they were based out of or what kind of ship they were on, [illegible] was true for all members of the Class of 2005, any cruise was better than being back at USNA. For some, this summer also marked the first encounter with ROTC Mids on cruise, finally getting to play Navy after their [illegible] semester at civilian colleges. Armed with a thick USS book and a [illegible] still reminded them of [illegible] Mids were greeted by their enlistee [illegible] upon arrival. Valuable [illegible] learned, like how to ping [illegible] sonar [illegible] grey are only to be [illegible] on a hull.

In addition to grey hull cruises, [illegible] of the Class of 2005 participated in PROTRAMID. It involved everyone with a chance to see three major warfare communities: Marines, aviation, and submarines. Spending a week with each community, the second class had a chance to see many operational sides of the Navy-Marine Corps team. A chance to fly, submerge, and yut in the field was enjoyed by most all who participated.

The quality and enjoyment of cruise varied from Mid to Mid. Some Second Class enjoyed cruise on Amphibs that never went out, while some chipped and painted on an old frigate. Some visited exotic places like Hawaii, Guam, or Australia while others got to be attached to an oiler in Earle, New Jersey. One thing was common with all cruises, it was much better than being back in classes.

Youngster Summer
Finally time to relax

The summer after Plebe year is the first real opportunity for the new 3/C to be treated like equal members of the Brigade. Even with the recognition ceremony after Sea Trials, Herndon, and Graduation, the tradition still stands that the 3/C are not "Youngsters" until they see the Chapel dome at the end of their YP cruise. Youngster summer is also the first opporunity for many midshipmen to spend time out on the open water during CSNTS or to learn more about the Marine Corps and Special Operations communities during NTT. Many midshipmen choose to display their leadership abilities for the first time by becoming involved in Summer Seminar and mentoring young high school students who want to follow in their footsteps.

U.S. NAVY

Induction Day 2004

1 JULY 2004 0630

A friendly welcome for the Plebes of '07.

"Having been appointed a Midshipman in the United States Navy, I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter, so help me God."

I-Day for the Class of 2007 was a shock to the senses for the new Plebes. Some arrived as early at 0630 to begin the most challenging six weeks of their lives. Before proceeding through the doors of Alumni Hall, most were seen hugging and saying goodbye to their parents. No family members were allowed into Alumni, as a sign bluntly stated. Once inside, the inductees came to a table where they verified data and received instructions. Many a Plebe got their first instructions wrong, when they responded to the detailer's question without using a "sir sandwich." After proceeding to the next station, where they were issued their own personal copy of Plebe Bible, formally known as Reef Points, they began a long day of tests, examinations, forms, equipment issue, and most importantly, a nice short haircut. Once they had finished their in-processing, the newly shorn plebes were taught how to salute and wear their covers. After this short instruction period, the Plebes were packed onto a bus for what some might call the longest ride of their lives. The bus finally pulled up to Bancroft Hall were the Plebes were quickly shuffled in to receive their new gear and room organization. Most of the plebes learned some new techniques from their shipmates who were either pure unfocused NAPSters. Finally it was time for the Oath of Office ceremony, the time when the new Plebes would be sworn in as Midshipmen, United States Navy. The oath was administered by Brigadier General (sel.) John R. Allen, USMC, then Commandant of Midshipmen. Speeches were given by VADM Moore, superintendent, and the OIC of Plebe Summer, Commander [illegible], USN. After a flyby of four F/A-18s, the plebes were [illegible] to a short, fifteen minute goodbye with their relatives. Soon enough their time was up, and the Plebes returned to formation. Tears were flowing from mothers' eyes as they said goodbye to their sons and daughters for the next six weeks. Finally the Plebes heard the ominous command, "forward, march," from the Senior Class Regimental Commander, MIDN CDR Schaeve. They then marched into King Hall for the beginning of a long and arduous Plebe Summer.

"The first and last words out of your mouth will be sir. Do you understand me?" "Yes, sir." "Try again. Do you understand me?" "Sir, yes, sir."

The Plebes say goodbye to their friends and family, whom they won't see until Plebe Parents Weekend.

Plebe Summer Detail

Training the Plebes to join the Brigade of Midshipmen

On 1 July 2003, the Plebes of the Class of 2007 began seven weeks of mentally and physically demanding training. The highly motivated detailers of the Class of 2004 and the Class of 2005 worked for countless hours to train the Plebes and get them ready to be members of the Brigade. The detailers got up before the plebes and went to bed long afterwards. Most of the plebes thought, "how hard can it be to sit here and rate us?" For many detailers, this was their first chance in a leadership role, so it was a challenge for them as well. The detailers were responsible for teaching the Plebes everything, including proper uniform wear, saluting, etiquette, drill, and professional knowledge to name a few. Starting well before waking the Plebes up at 0530, the detailers were constantly busy. All detailers went to morning PEP with the Plebes, and they had to do their own uniform races to get ready in time for morning formation. Morning meal was filled for more rating and less eating for the detailers. They were constantly testing their charges on that day's professional knowledge, which could range from platforms to the "Qualifications of a Naval Officer," around the world style. After meal, the detailers would form their squads up and march them to their first evolution of the day. If the evolution was run by another detailer, the squad leaders might get a change to catch a little nap. But, as in many of the physical evolutions, the detailers often participated in the training right along with the plebes, challenging them every step of the way. After the morning evolutions, it was off to noon meal formation in Tecumsah Court. There the Regimental Commander would bring the entire fourth class regiment to attention and then order them to march into King Hall. At noon meal, it was more of the same rates from breakfast. After lunch there would be more training, plus drill and intermurals. During drill, the squad leaders and platoon commanders honed the marching, facing movements, and rifle manual of arms skills of the Plebes. This was often a stressful job, for most of the new Midshipmen had no prior experience marching in step. All of this training culminated in the drill competition, where one false move could cause a platoon to lose points. After drill there were intermurals, evening meal, more training and rates, and finally the singing of Navy Blue and Gold, which would end the night for the Plebes, but the detailers were not done. They would often be up late at night doing paperwork or planning evolutions for the next day. Despite the stressful nature, the detailers took satisfaction when their Plebes were finally trained and ready to join the Brigade during reform.

Plebe Parents' Weekend

The summer is almost over and it's liberty call

The Drum and Bugle Corps marches out to noon meal formation in their new summer whites.

COL Allen encourages the Plebes as they run in for PEP.

The long and grueling? summer continued for the Class of 2007 as Parents' Weekend slowly approached after six longs weeks of Plebe Summer. For the Plebes, it marked the first time the new Plebes had liberty. For the parents, it marked the first time that had seen their son or daughter since I-day.

Plebe Parents' Weekend started off with an early morning PEP session as usual; training didn't cease because the families were there. As the families waited with yawns and rubbing the sleep out of their eyes, their new Midshipmen did pushups, sit-ups, and ran for the numerous cameras present. Later on, Stribling Walk crowded as everyone fought for their first glimpse of their child in whites ready to go in the town. Trips to the mall and local restaurants were popular events for the weekend, as was just relaxing (i.e. sleeping) in their comfortable hotel rooms.

Saturday brought on more pictures taken around the Yard and the chance for families to see inside the giant mystery that is Bancroft Hall. Plebes showed off their clean rooms, much cleaner than they had ever been in high school, and introduced their families to their detailers, despite fears that their rooms would embarrass them. But this was a proud time for the detailers as well, their first real break since taking on their first set. Some detailers' parents even came for the weekend reminiscing about that wonderful weekend previous by three years ago (but it felt like yesterday).

With the weekend finally over, tears-over-yourself-yourself to be covered up before the detailers could see. For most Plebes it would be a long couple of months before they would see their loved ones again. At 1800 on Sunday, Plebe Summer continued and parents started their long journey home. All amazed at the transformation their son or daughter had made in just six short weeks. Maybe the care packages helped.

A Plebe and a loved one embrace for the first time in six weeks(above). CDR McCormack tells the parents how they transformed their kids into PT machines.

Parade Season

Discipline, Teamwork, and you guessed it, Professionalism

"Mmmm, black wool uniforms in the sun."

It was the chance to honor those who came before us and display our discipline, teamwork, and professionalism to those watching. With precision and poise we marched onto Worden Field and rendered honors to those reviewing the parade. The sun shined, the band played, the cannons roared, the corpsmen ran, and the Brigade marched on.

Navy Football 2003

Midshipmen claim an 8-5 record

I believe that we will win! was a common chant during the 2003 Navy Football Season. Following a dismal 2-10 season, Navy Football was looking for a better year. They certainly made a remarkable turnaround. They started by winning the season opener vs VMI at Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium. The following weekend they traveled to Texas Christian University (TCU), where they lost to a nationally ranked opponent. Back at home two weeks later, the support of the Brigade of Midshipmen drove the team to an overwhelming 39-7 victory over Easter Michigan University for Firstie Parents Weekend. On the road again, the Midshipmen traveled to Piscataway, NJ, home of Rutgers University, where they posted another loss. The following weekend gave the Midshipmen what was possibly the most meaningful victory of the season. At FedEx field in Washington, DC, the Midshipmen posted a close win (28-25) vs Air Force. This was the first time that Navy has beaten Air Force since 1996. This game proved to be a big boost to the Midshipmen, who posted wins at Vanderbilt and Rice the following two weekends. The next weekend the Midshipmen were back at home to play Delaware for the Homecoming game. In front of a sellout crowd, they played a close game. They, however, lost by just four points (17-21). That didn't phase the Midshipmen, however, for they won by an eighteen point margin (35-17) against Tulane at home. The next weekend they traveled to South Bend, IN, home of Notre Dame. The Midshipmen were looking to break a 39-year loosing streak versus the Irish. They proceeded to lose when Notre Dame kicked a game winning field goal at the end of the 4th Quarter. The Midshipmen took a week off and then returned home to play the final home game versus Central Michigan University. They beat the Chippewas handily, (63-34). Then the Mids went to Philly to play the most meaningful game of the year, the N-Star game vs archrival Army. It was bitter cold at Lincoln Financial Field, but that didn't phase the Blue and Gold. Army was only allowed one touchdown in the Midshipmen's 34-6 victory. This game ended the regular season, but because of their winning record, the Navy Football team received an invitation to the EV1.net Bowl in Houston, TX. Over 2000 Midshipmen traveled to Houston to support the team. Despite all of their best efforts, the Midshipmen fell to the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Tailgaters

Mids' favorite part of the game

Midshipmen continuing to party long after the game

The Right Spirit tailgater was especially popular with their catered Famous Dave's Barebeque

Navy's home football games have always been an incredible show of spirit. Whether we were winning or losing, the fans and alumni always showed up in droves to spend the afternoon at Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium. This year, with our remarkable series of victories at home, the energy of the game carried over to the parking lot for a great tailgating experience.

Everyone seems to have their own tailgate party, from alumni groups and parents clubs to individual companies and organizations within the brigade. Even individual fans or local area businesses who just love a good Saturday afternoon party would rather every available space outside the stadium to cook, eat, play music, and listen to the results of the Navy game and all the other college football action from the day. When the food and drink are flowing and tailgating weather, Midshipman can find a tailgate to join. Alumni and current Midshipman have a great opportunity to visit and talk over their common interest and love of college football.

Going out at halftime, or even earlier, these tailgaters are a major part of the Navy Football experience. The lot is bustling with activity long before and after the game. Some fans never even enter the stadium, instead choosing to listen to the game from outside. Even hours after the game has ended, the activity in the lot continues as Navy's dedicated fans, alums and family and Mids prepare for their upcoming weekend travels.

Firstie Parents' Weekend

September 20-21, 2003

Firstie Parents' Weekend for the Class of 2004 was overshadowed by Hurricane Isabel, which struck the night before. As parents and friends arrived at the Naval Academy, most were turned away because over half of the yard was underwater. Rather than attending class with their Midshipmen, parents instead enjoyed extra liberty with them. Both classes and the formal parade were cancelled for the day. Unfortunately for Midshipmen the next day the march-on to the football game was still held and the rest of the weekend went on as planned. Many families gathered at the Navy-Marine Corps Stadium to watch Navy defeat Eastern Michigan 39-7. For the rest of the time Midshipmen and their families and friends enjoyed a quiet weekend around the yard. Some even stayed until Monday morning so they could go to class.

Hurricane Isabel
Trial by water

As Isabel brewed in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean, the yard buzzed with talk of whether it would hit us and how severe it would be. With every incoming weather report, hopes would rise and fall. In the hours before she made landfall, it looked as though Isabel would strike but the storm would not be too intense. Nobody was quite prepared, though, for the changes that took place overnight. Winds howled and rain fell, but as darkness set in it was little more than amusing. By morning, the yard had taken on a geography not seen in years. The Severn had risen over seven feet, reclaiming area that had been water before the extra land was built up several decades ago. We later learned that there had been a triple effect on the river, with a storm surge, heavy rain and extra runoff water raising the water level well beyond most estimates.

As Isabel approaches, a ship plays the odds...

As the Academy woke up on September 19th, rumors, stories and a bit of actual information began to come in. Midshipmen were advised to stay inside Bancroft Hall because many areas just outside were completely inaccessible. Each company organized to get food directly from the King Hall kitchen, as there was standing water covering much of the dining area. Working parties were arranged to begin the task of cleaning up the yard as well as helping keep everyone occupied. Slowly, water and power came back on and upperclass were even allowed to leave the yard, alleviating cabin fever and food supply issues. Within a matter of days the Academy was back up and running, but lasting damage took much longer to sort out.

We were advised to move cars the night befor

One of the most notable effects of the Hurricane was the near total loss of some buildings and facilities on the yard. Academic buildings had been sandbagged, but the water level rose high enough to completely flood the bottom floors and many of the labs. In the coming days and weeks, creative solutions were devised to fit class space wherever possible. Mobile classrooms, a giant barge and even class space in company wardrooms became a normal part of everyday life. Even as the seasons changed, the Academy struggled to restore the campus to operational status. With the compromises, though, came hidden benefits. Construction on new lab space is being accelerated and there are even promises of air conditioning in Bancroft Hall. We also learned how to prepare better for natural disaster and hope that future classes will never have to deal with such a unique experience again.

Break the Record Night

Navy Women's Soccer takes on #1 UNC Tarheels

September 26th was a record breaking night for Navy women's soccer. Before the largest crowd a regular-season NCAA women's soccer game has ever seen, Navy duked it out against the No. 1 ranked Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina. While Navy's 34-game regular-season unbeaten streak was compromised, the team undoubtedly won the hearts of thousands of fans for their unrelenting efforts.

The match against UNC marked the first time in the program's 11 year history Navy women's soccer played a number one nationally ranked team. The build up to the game was obviously tense considering UNC's evident talent. 2/C Xochitl Piedra, Navy forward, explained her feelings leading up to the game. She claims, "no one was really nervous to play them, just fired up and anxious." No doubt, playing for the first time at the Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium against a nationally accredited team was an historic opportunity for the team; all were enthusiastic. Even the Brigade was eager for the "Beat the Record Night." Posters were placed throughout Bancroft, and announcements were made daily encouraging attendance to the game in order to break the NCAA single-game attendance mark of 6,070. Previously, Navy had seen no more than 900 people attend a regular season game, so many believed topping the record would be a stretch.

Nevertheless, the game's promotion was clearly effective! 6,527 fans packed the stands of Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium that Friday night. Enticed by a pre-game tailgater catered by Annapolis's local Famous Dave's Barbeque and the opportunity to sport the never-before-worn "Midshipman Casual" uniform, the Brigade was more than ready to support their team. 2/C Kim Bonafede, Navy goalkeeper, spoke of the crowd's driving force saying, "you get energy from the crowd and suddenly you can run faster and play harder." Undeniably the Brigade's presence and encouragement made the battle against UNC less difficult for Navy.

Unfortunately, Navy fell one goal short of hanging with the number one ranked team. While some considered the defeat nothing more than a loss and a break in Navy's win streak, the Brigade and its team saw the game as much more. Despite the results, the Brigade certainly enjoyed a Friday night outside of Bancroft in which they could show their support for one of the Academy's best athletic teams. Great job to Navy women's soccer! Here's to another year of Patriot League Champions and NCAA tournament contestants. The Brigade backs you!

Navy-Air Force Game
October 4, 2003

Navy-Air Force

For the first time since 1981, the Commander-in-Chief's Trophy finally rests once again at USNA. It is the direct result of the 2003-2004 Navy-Air Force game, one which Midshipmen and alumni will never forget. The last time we had beaten Air Force was in 1996 and it had been 18 years since we beat a ranked opponent. This year we did both. The triple-option, the determination of the team, and the spirit of the Brigade ensured the victory over the Zoomies and led us all the way to a bowl game. Now as caretakers of the trophy, Navy's players have the responsibility of keeping the CinC trophy in Annapolis, where it belongs. With the support of the Stage, the Commandant, and ultimately the Brigade of Midshipmen, Navy football has all the backing it will need to beat Air Force again next year.

"I didn't park my car here..." The 'Dant's Car during Army Week

The new semester begins a transition in the Brigade as old traditions are renewed or, in some cases, modified. The Second Class signed commitment papers with little fanfare compared to years passed, but that was nothing to diminish the severity and seriousness of the papers they had signed. A dinner with the Class of '55 was held for the Class of 2005 celebrating their commitment to a lifetime of service.

The Brigade as a whole celebrated the start of the new school year with the annual Crab Feast as thousands of Mids enjoyed Maryland's staple export. It was a time for PE gear in King Hall as the wooden mallets met shell to reveal juicy crabmeat. Final Night opened up the Fall Sports season as the [illegible] Pep Rally of the year. There was catered food [illegible] and fun on Farragut for all who attended. Thirsty [illegible] the Blowfish rocked Alumni Hall while Navy fall sports dominated on the field.

Finally, to end the Fall semester for the Second Class, a Martial Arts Culminating Event was held on Hospital Point in order to test the mettle of the Brigade on their new defense techniques. To get one, midshipmen must break enough regulations to be a mischief but not enough to get separated.

In 1958, you could get a Black N for keeping a television set in your room. That is how Sen. John McCain came within a hairsbreadth of joining the Black N society. McCain and his friends hid their TV inside a pipe locker, only bringing it out on weekends to watch boxing matches and episodes of "Maverick." Naturally, his company officer did not think it was as good of an idea as he did. The friends played paper-rock-scissors to decide who would take the fall for the group. The first Black N was made on 11 NOV 1912, when a pair of friends, Eric Zemke and George Wolf, tested a new rule which stated that any midshipmen who had committed an outrageous offense would be sentenced to stay aboard the Reina Mercedes. Captured in the Spanish-American War, the cruiser was anchored at the academy until 1957. "When you live on the edge like that, you learn a whole lot about yourself and a lot about what your priorities are," said Col. John Ripley, a 1962 graduate. He won his Black N with Peter Golwas, his partner in crime, after they were caught returning from a boozy evening in Annapolis. "I think a lot of people thought we were a little crazy," Golwas said. "We thought we were awfully cool."

Army Week, the one week in the fall semester where schoolwork and sleep is forgotten in an attempt to perform the ultimate prank. Army Week has been toned down since the broken arm incident of 2001, with which one of the members of our staff was intimately involved, but it does not mean that the festivities of the week are gone completely. More creative and colorful ways to show school spirit have been inspired by this new wave of sanitization and regulation of Army Week that followed in the wake of 2001. Powder paint, shaving cream, sand, alarm clocks in the ceilings, ropes to tie doors shut, newspapers and clothes hangers in the room, moving offices into the head, all sorts of crazy stuff that people at normal colleges could only dream about.

Army Week
Hilarity Ensues

The Plebers could see the end at the light at the end of the tunnel for the first semester. For the upperclass, the excitement of Army Week leaves them with mixed feelings. Fear of revenge for rating a Plebe at a chow call station months before or for that incident back in Plebe Summer that made them all cry, many upperclass are on the defensive all week. The sight of carry-on porches sickens the trainers. Making their own concoctions of Beat Armies at lunch brings back a bad taste in the mouth, more of a reason to make this year's [illegible] more disgusting. However, at the end of the week there are the parties and the tailgaters and the alcohol [illegible] look forward to. Army-Navy Football
What it's all about.....

On December 6th, Navy (7-4) competed against Army's winless Black Knights in Lincoln Federal in Philadelpia. Baring snow and freezing temperatures the game held close throughout the first half. However, in the latter part of the game, the Mids' triple option took charge and put several points on the board. Once again, Navy proved superior on the football field, defeating Army 34-6.

The win was monumental, for Navy claimed the Commander-in-Chief's trophy for the first time in 22 years.

Houston Bowl

December 30, 2003

After making history in many areas, the 8-4 Navy Midshipmen were rewarded with a bid to the EV1.Net Houston Bowl on December 30, 2003 in Houston, Texas. The Mids faced a tall task as their opponents were the Texas Tech Raiders. The 7-5 Red Raiders had played well all season long, losing only to teams such as Texas and Oklahoma.

The Midshipmen played a solid first half, but a late touchdown in the 2nd quarter left them trailing at halftime [illegible]. After halftime, Navy came out in their opening possession and had worked so well all year. They quickly scored [illegible] making it 14-7.

The score was 24-14 with 11:00 left in the game. [illegible] Navy was becoming worn down and could no longer [illegible] the Red Raiders. Texas Tech's offense powered [illegible] more touchdowns, making the final score [illegible].

Winter Break

Classes end and the good times begin

Winter Break

Ah, Winter Break, the time when the Mids leave Crabtown for home and adventures that somewhat resemble normal college life. As finals finished and Mids closed out the Fall semester, homecomings were common as the Brigade filtered out into American society, if only for a few weeks. Some went home to colder weather while other got to recharge themselves in warmer climates. Plebes could now drive again got to tell all their friends back home how "tough" Plebe Summer was while Firsties returned home for one final time before their new careers would take them across the globe.

Winter Break is a time of homecomings and adventures that had to wait until the semester ended. Unsurprisingly, Mids went home, some took the opportunity to travel or take on other interesting endeavors. What is even more [illegible] this year's leave was the number of Mids who gave up their precious time off for [illegible] the biggest event to the Houston [illegible] Teams competed [illegible] the true "Spirit of the [illegible]." Games come all too quickly and [illegible] of the Dark Ages awaited [illegible].

Winter 2004

The Dark Ages

When the days get longer and longer...

The Dark Ages are the period of time from the last day of Christmas leave until the first day of Spring Break at the Naval Academy during which everything turns grey and gloomy. The days seem to double in length. The weather turns cold and it snows. To pass the time, midshipmen watch Navy basketball games, set up weekend ski trips, play sports, watch plenty of DVD's, play computer games, work out, and occasionally do some homework.

Time away on the weekend becomes of great importance. Sponsor families play a huge role in keeping morale up. More often than not liberty ends too soon and the mids find themselves back in the hall. Late night games of hockey, lacrosse, or even Frisbee are what often times ensue.

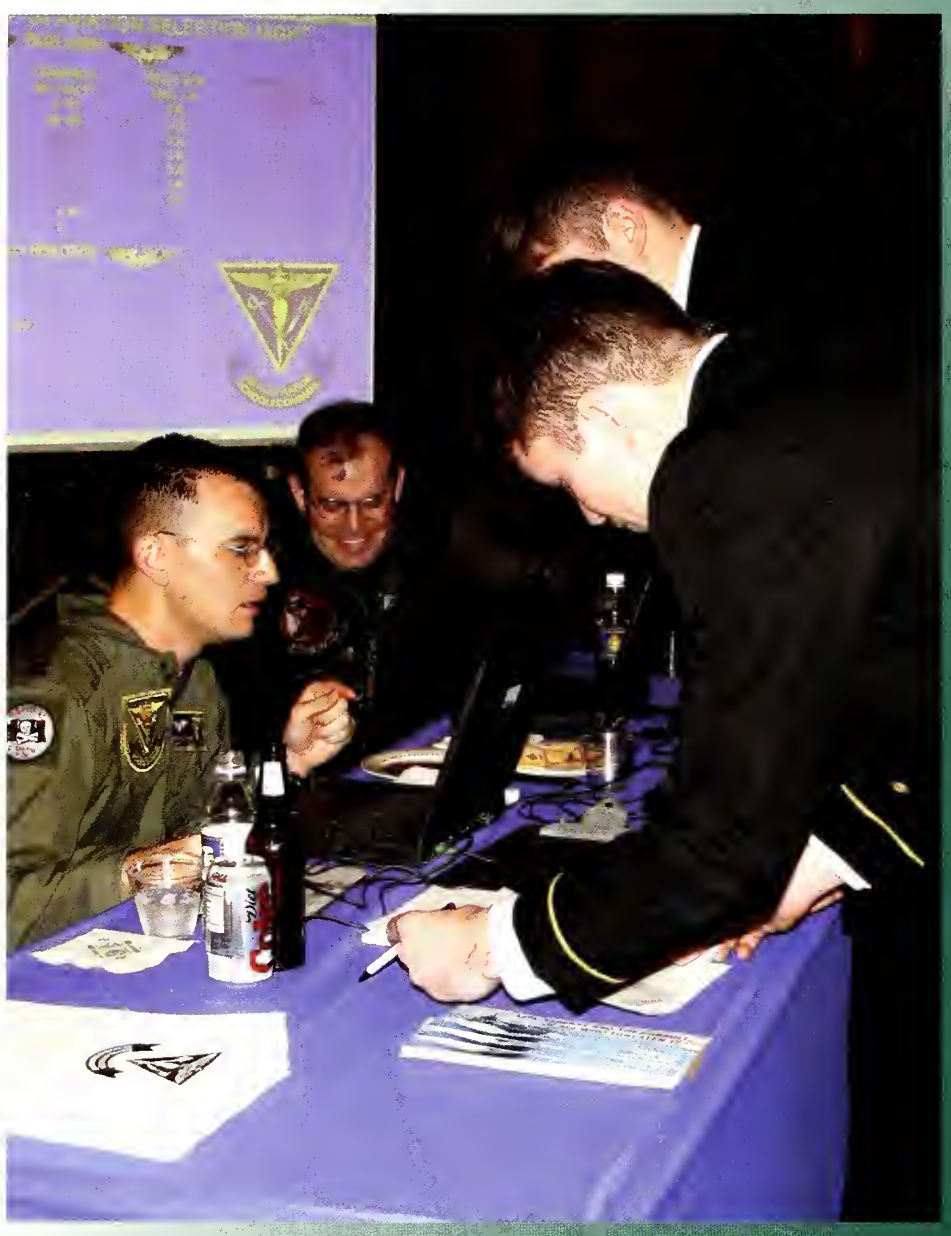
Preparing for the Fleet



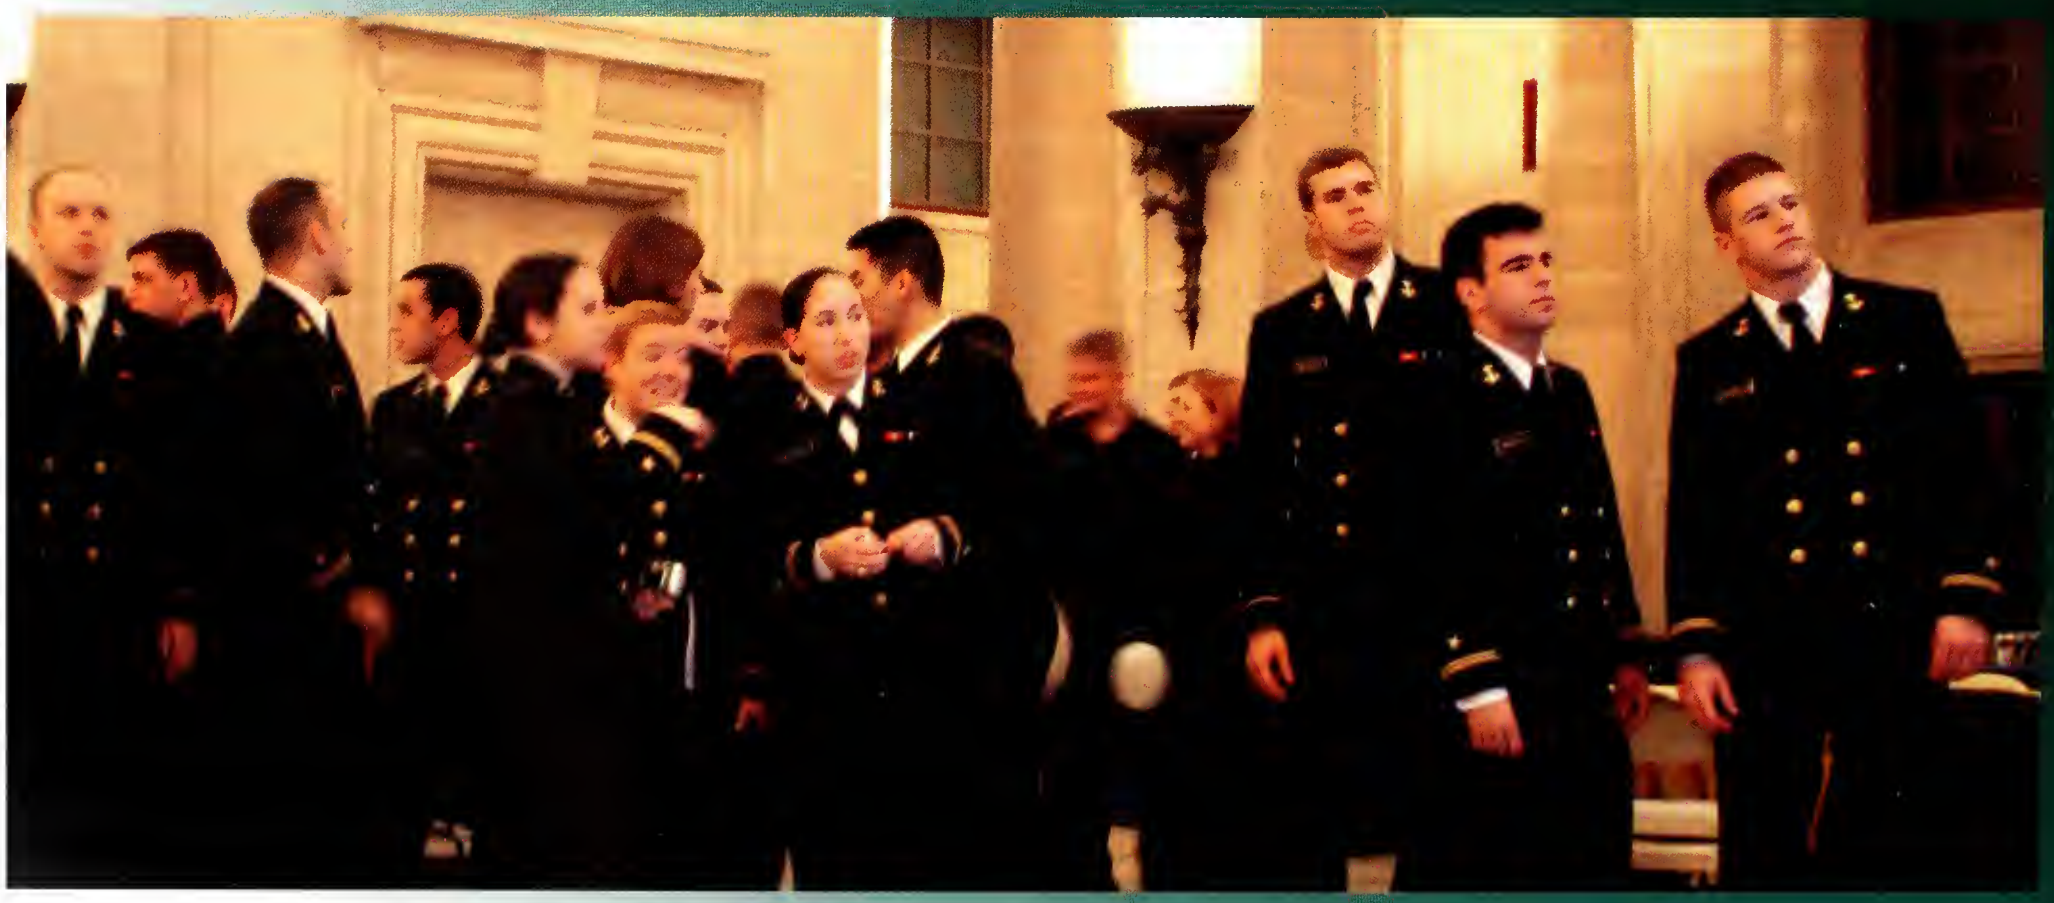
Service Assignment '04

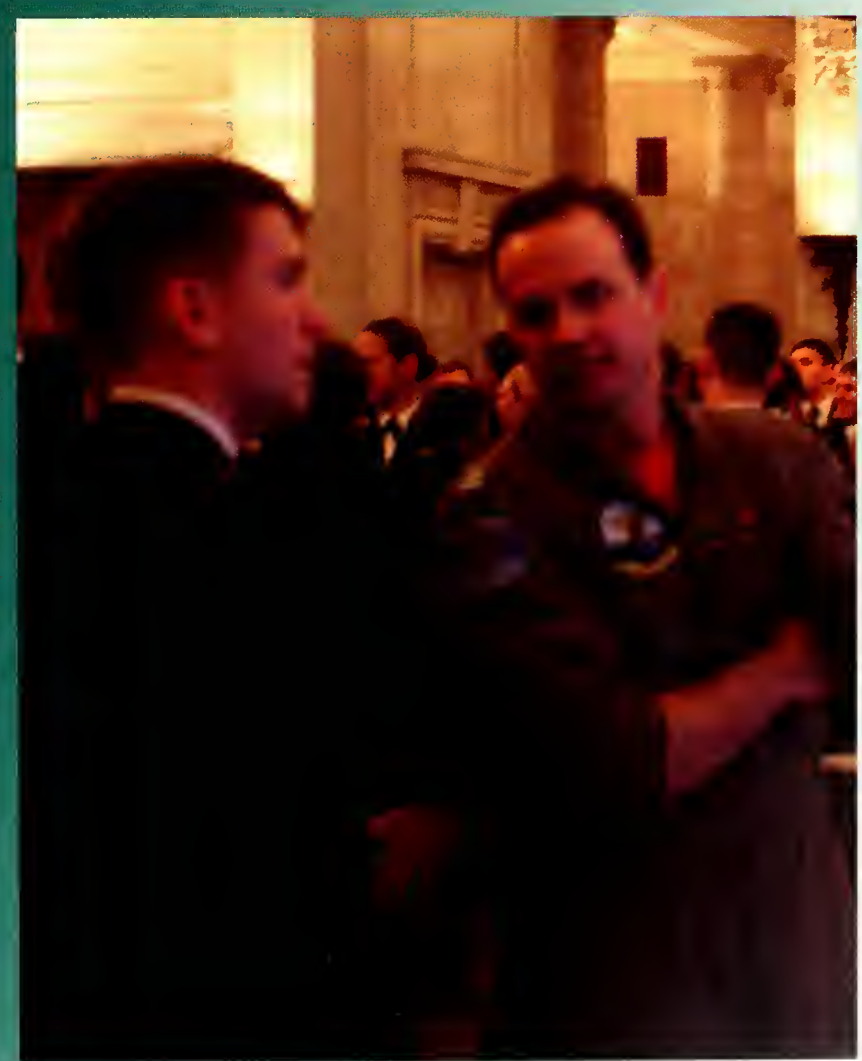
Four years by the bay seemed to pass with the blink of an eye. After years of intense academics, physicals and a grueling interview process, the Class of 2004 had been given their Service Assignments. Service Assignment night 2004 will stick in the memory of the members of the Class of 2004 forever. It was a memorable night when the future careers of soon to be graduates were etched in stone, and future Navy and Marine Corps officers titled the next chapter of their lives. Firsties were given the opportunity to interact and mingle with many senior and junior officers in their respective service communities. Midshipmen signed up for their respective school dates while the Surface Warfare selectees had probably the most exciting and nerve racking night as they picked their ships and homeports around the world. It was an exciting night for all involved as the new wave of leaders in our nation's Navy and Marine Corps prepared to embark on exciting new careers.

Navy Air

"That's right, a Naval aviator..."

Those few, those happy few.....hundred that get to go Naval aviation have the distinct honor of graduating the Academy only to sit and wait to class up for flight school. But that's ok for them, because while not learning how to fly, the new aviatiors are learning more important skills. Skills such as how to oil themselves up to play beach volleyball. They learn the local watering holes and become regulars there. Sure eventually they will learn how to fly and navigate the clouds but that is only secondary to the knowledge that they will gain from being on their own. Most an entire lifetime. Whichever it is though, every single new aviator is beaming with pride for what they are about to embark on. And although they wait hearts pounding to select the same date as their friends to go to Pensacola, to them it truly does not matter. For nothing can take away that feeling knowing that you are going to be a Naval Aviator.





Surface/Nuclear Surface

Our Mighty Sea Warriors

Surface Warfare provides one of the most intriguing and challenging leadership opportunities in the Navy. Within one year of checking onboard, the new Ensign can be a qualified Surface Warfare Officer and Officer-of-the-Deck on a United States Navy Warship, leading hundreds of sailors. What can be more exciting than to be part of the team in charge of one of the most complex devices ever developed, a modern, U.S. Navy warship comprised of between 4,000 to 40,000 tons of steel, state of the art electronics, equipment and machinery. With the honor of choosing Warships around the world to embark on their first tour, Firsties proudly walked up to the selection board on Service Assignment night and pulled down the name of their desired ship under the respective locations in the world, amidst a crowd of proud family and distinguished guests. Homeports of choice included San Diego, Pearl Harbor, Norfolk, Little Creek, Mayport, Gaeta, Yokusuka, Sasebo, Bahrain, Ingleside, Bremerton, Everett and more. These newly selected Surface Warfare Officers (SWO's) will play an extremely important role in the future as the most significant projection of power of the United States. They have the distinction of taking the fight to anyone anywhere. They truly are the backbone of the Navy.

The 2004 Marine class knew from the moment they were selected that they would be a special group. The Naval Academy Class of 2004 Marines would find more among their ranks than any other class; the normal 16 and two-thirds percent agreement between the Navy and Marine Corps being changed to reflect the need for more Marine Officers and the growing desire among midshipman to join the ranks of The Few The Proud. Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference

The Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference is the largest undergraduate foreign affairs conference in the country. Delegates from colleges across the country and around the world come every year to debate and learn about a topic of current importance to the foreign policy community. In addition to roundtable discussions, international recognized speakers and panels, everyone have a chance to interact with midshipmen and as some of the foundations of the Naval Academy. Over the course of the three day conference everyone has chance to learn from these great guys.

Spring Events

April showers bring May flowers

Once the Dark Ages end, midshipmen enter the home stretch. Plebes count the days until Herndon. Youngsters bring their soon-to-be-legal civvies into Bancroft. Second Class can't wait to drive on the land, and Firsties are more than ready to end their four years by the bay. With Summer Leave to look forward to, second semester always seems to go by quickly. It ends much too soon for most, but it is a time of celebrating and [illegible] leave on Commissioning Week. Croquet
Battle with the Johnnies

For many years the members of 28th Company or "Club 28" have challenged the Johnnies to a grudge match of croquet. It all began long ago when a mid boasted there was no sport. St. John's could defeat the middies at. Subsequently, the Johnnies challenged the middies to croquet. It has now become a much-anticipated annual event. Each year the members of the Club 28 croquet team practice daily preparing themselves for the challenge.

The day before the game you can see the young members of the team strolling through the halls of Bancroft in their white sweaters, brandishing their mallets, taking practice swings at the air. They are ready to take on the Johnnies on their own turf.

This year we not only Club 28 is already prepared for next year's match. It is an exciting match.

Life as a First Class

Can it get any better?

Firstie year, the last year at the Academy, and its also the closest that a Mid will ever come to being a normal college student. So many events made this the best year of the four, and well if you can remember any of them you probably did not have a good enough time. Parent's weekend in a hurricane, one of the best football seasons in the past few decades. Service assignment night, and all of Commissioning Week, it truly was a year to remember. Firstie year is about tuning the shills that will be needed in dealing sailors and marines in the fleet, but on the upper deck it's about having as much fun as you possibly can. It's about the bar tenders and bouncers at Dillons knowing your Bullet then your own practicum instructor. All in all, life as a 1/C Midshipman, moment-to-moment in the heavy weather maybe Admiral, is pretty good.

Life as a Second Class
So close, yet so far.....

Once the Firstie covers fly and the newly commissioned Ensigns and Second Lieutenants don new insignia, another transformation takes place for the newly minted Second Class Midshipmen. After returning to the Hall and changing into civilian clothes, ones that just happened to appear, and driving around in the car that jus happened to arrive in the Annapolis area roughly around the same time graduation happened. You are now free to wear these clothes and drive this car free from fear of getting in trouble.

Second Class summer brought fleet experiences and a chance to see what it is that you would most likely be doing after graduation. Detail tested our patience as rules and regulations restricted us from leading the way we remember. Soon, Reform comes and you finally realize that your friends here are what keeps you going. Signing the commitment papers, Tuesday and Friday night liberty, and civies at tailgaters are some privileges we look forward to in the fall. These privileges also come with new responsibility, the job of "trainer" of the new, weaker class of midshipmen. Though many of us told ourselves we would never be the flamers, pure disgust for the plebes and anger for not meeting the standard changed our minds.

The new found freedom of civies and cars soon loses its appeal and yearning for Firstie privileges arises. In just a few months, we can drive on the Yard but those are a long few months away. Changes to the cruise system receives mixed reviews but who cares, the summer is coming. With pewter class mugs in hand, we salute those we have stuck it out with us and toast the good times to come. Going to sporting events in our own clothes and cheering on our buddies like normal college students gave us a glimpse of what we gave up, but also a great view of what we are getting in return.

With Firstie year approaching fast, one more obstacle to overcome: Ring Dance. A white jacket we may never wear again and a bowl full of water flown in from around the world, this one night means a final sign of acceptance into the long line of graduates that has come before us. Wearing the class ring is just a symbol, a sign of the common hardship and struggle all graduates have endured. One more year to go before the rest of our lives.

"It's really cold, but we're smiling." (Army/Navy)

Footloose.

Life as a Third Class

Wow, it feels good to be a youngster...

Life as a Third Class may not be a glorious one by any stretch of the imagination, but it is a year characterized by new freedom, independence and responsibility. Fresh off of summer cruise and training, youngsters walk into reform a few inches taller and with a little bit of salt under their belt. While some choose to fully embrace their newly earned stripe, others adhere to the cliché and "fall into the cracks" immediately, not to be heard from again until legally donning the civies that magically appear in their rooms after graduation. Third Class are typically supposed to assume the role of "mentor" to the plebes, however, it is somewhat difficult to mentor when spending 50% of their time in the rack, 25% watching movies, playing video games or blasting their stereo systems and 25% ordering takeout or eating. Many Third Class have an emotionally draining year. After all, being a glorified plebe is only enjoyable for so long. While this fact brings many down, other "youngstars" use their subtle new freedoms to let loose. Come time for liberty, youngsters casually stroll out the gates with a backpack filled with regulation PE gear to change into when they get to their (sponsors) cars conveniently waiting for them at the West Street garage. With the addition of "Midshipman Casual" as an authorized uniform that plebes and youngsters can sport to many events which previously required a formal uniform, many Third Class were absolutely thrilled. In fact, several youngsters have been spotted on leave in the new attire. Third Class year marks an important transition in the life of a Midshipman; when they become a more mature and knowledgeable young man or woman and enter into the upperclass of the Brigade. With this transition comes responsibility, as using the "dumb plebe" excuse doesn't exactly fly any more. After a year of trying academics, plenty of sleep, and lots of complaining, Youngster year culminates [illegible] the [illegible] the knowledge [illegible] 7 commitment [illegible] away. [illegible] of many to the [illegible] complacency. However [illegible] over [illegible] Have you [illegible] not [illegible] out of the crowd.

Intramurals

Battling it out for color points and glory

Intramural sports may not be the most visible activity at the Academy, but they mean everything to the "Intramural Warriors." Throughout the fall, winter, and spring, the Brigade is hard at work two to three times a week on the fields of Hospital Point, the courts of MacDonough Hall, and the 7th Wing Tennis Courts. All participants are in search of the ultimate title: Brigade Intramural Champion.

In the fall, seven teams were crowned intramural champions. 2nd Company claimed the Basketball championship with a stellar 18-1-0 record. 30th Company took honors in Cross Country with 9 wins and 2 losses. 16th Company battled to victory in Flag Football after 18-3-3 season. 6th Company won the Racquetball championship with 15 wins and 2 ties. In Soccer, 1st Company was victorious after an 18-0-5 season. 22nd Company took Street Hockey honors after a 16-0-5 season. 4th Batallion had a sweeping season in Intramural Sailing, boasting a 5-0-0 record.

This year was the first year that the Brigade held winter intramural smokers. There were 15 events, of which each intramural warrior was required to participate in two. Although most of these events lasted only a few days, most Midshipman agree that having more time to work out is a good thing during the winter season.

The Spring Intramural season included seven events: 3-on-3 Basketball (Mens and Womens), Fieldball, Company Golf, Half-Marathon, Batallion Sailing, Slow Pitch Softball, and Team Handball. 30th Company took honors as the Men's 3-on-3 Basketball Champion. In Women's Battallion Basketball, 6th Battalion was the victor. 14th Company was the low team in the Intramural Golf Tournament. The Half-Marathon Championship was cancelled due to rain. 17th Company won the championship trophy in both Slow Pitch Softball and Fieldball.

At the spring awards ceremony, 30th Company was presented with the Naval Academy Foundation Cup, an award for earning the most color points in athletics throughout the year. 4th Battalion won the Navy-Marine Corps [illegible] color [illegible] Battalion [illegible] season [illegible] achieve [illegible] ed State [illegible]

Company Events

Although companymates spend countless hours together inside Bancroft Hall and around the yard, it is the times spent outside of the Academy's walls that really bring a company close. Different companies choose various ways to bond, ranging from formal dining-outs, tailgaters, picnics, camping, or even ski trips. Dining-outs give companies the chance to dress up in mess dress and spend a night of fun and excitement off the yard. While other events are much less formal, they provide the same opportunities for companies to draw closer together.

Mids in Class

From Civilians to Six-ins

Many midshipmen have said that the Naval Academy really wouldn't be that bad if it weren't for the classes. Unfortunately, going to class is what we get paid to do. Sometimes it's hard to understand why an English major is forced to take Chemistry and Electrical Engineering, but we all knew we were coming to one of the top engineering schools in the country when we signed up. With classes that teach a wide range of subjects from Leadership and Navigation to Physics and Thermodynamics, midshipmen graduate as some of the most well-rounded college students in the country. Our minimum number of 15 credit hours per semester is the maximum number that many regular college kids will ever take in one semester. Thanks to a dedicated faculty and staff who offer endless hours of E.I., most midshipmen are able to adjust to the rigorous demands of academic life and the Naval Academy.

Wardrooms

Who drank my milk!?!?!

Wardrooms… the safe haven of upper class and the unknown entity to the Plebes. A place where everyone can get away from it all and get involved in such things like reality TV shows and sporting events. Lets not forget the return of the Sopranos either.

With an assortment of chairs and couches, companies crowd into the Wardrooms to watch favorite shows, or even better, have monthly honor, HERO, ADEO, or SAVI training. The refrigerators are packed with food, but only food that can be easily parted with, as every wardroom suffers from the same creatures that eat other peoples' food regardless of the name on it. The microwave and toaster are badly in need of cleaning since the last person didn't clean up after their cup-o-noodles spilled all over the place, and the air is sill filled with the smell of burnt popcorn.

Some wardrooms are better than others, but they all share a unique living-room feel from back home. Foosball tables, video game machines, some have it all, while some, just have the bare essentials. The wardroom is an extension of a company's personality.

Spring Break 2004

So this is what real college is like....

Spring Break..."A time when midshipmen can act like normal college students." For the average midshipman, Spring Break means so much more than just nine days of relaxation and maybe some partying. The week officially ends the Dark Ages. What better way to break free from the winter season than going to the Bahamas, Cancun, South America, Europe, or even home?

The Lucky Bag staff interviewed a few midshipmen before jumping on the much-anticipated break. The answers were quite interesting and truly reflect the anticipation and reverence midshipmen have for the holiday's inception.

MIDN [illegible]: I'm going OUTCONUS this year. My family and I are going to Iceland. I hear [illegible] are new homes when it comes to party [illegible].

Balls

Mids at their finest

While many things have changed over the years at good old USNA, one thing remains constant: mids know how to have fun. The dances and balls of the 2003-2004 season provided an incredible amount of entertainment for midshipmen and their dates. Guests came from all over - from as close as Crabtown itself to overseas countries such as Germany, Brazil, Japan, and others. The balls provide an excellent opportunity for midshipmen to show off their dancing skills as well as prove that they really are gentlemen and ladies (though for many only by order of Congress). This year's top balls were the Plebe Formal, the Debutante Ball, Homecoming, and the Tailhook Ball (a midshipman favorite). Dances [illegible] limited to functions on the yard. Many [illegible] colleges, such as Immaculata College and the College of Notre Dame of Maryland, host [illegible] midshipmen. Occasionally, a few [illegible] own dances to go to, whether it's a [illegible] at a random sorority formal. Fifth-class [illegible] men and women of the Seventy-third [illegible] ball season - times they will never forget.

Sea Trials
Class of 2007

Sea Trials marked the final test of the Class of 2007 before the Plebe Recognition ceremony of Herndon. The day starts at 0-dark-30, with a wake up call and a quick breakfast in King Hall. Camouflage utilities and face paint were donned and the Plebers, along with their cadre, were ready for action. MREs were packed up in every pocket because every calorie eaten later on in the day would be vital. A quick muster at Turf Field to set the day's event in motion and the day of reckoning began.

Stations in the mud of the Naval Station, water of Lejune, grass of Farragut tested the Plebes both mentally and physically. Many of the events tested teamwork, the most important lesson of Plebe Year. Individual strengths were used to accomplish a team goals and the dependence on other [illegible] one last time to the Plebe class. [illegible] involved in the day as well. The Plebes' No More of the Class of 2007 made their Herndon Climb on Thursday the 20th of May. This new change to the traditional Commissioning Week activities was created to give the Plebes their own week of festivities instead of making them a sideshow to the rest of the Commissioning Week festivities. The climb was also changed this year to be more organized and become more of a Plebe tradition instead of the massive free-for-all it was years past. Commissioning Week
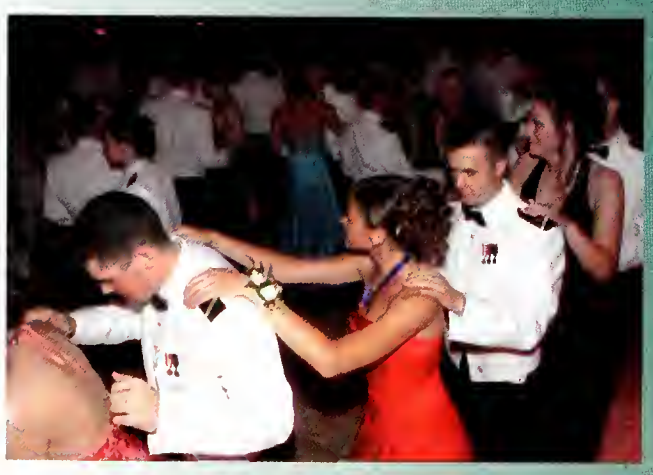
The best week ever!

No matter what class they happen to be a part of, every midshipman looks forward to commissioning week. For some it means the end to harassment and an arduous plebe year and to others it is a chance to spend a romantic night under the stars on hospital point, but no one looks forward to commissioning week as much as the firsties. For them it means an end to a long four years and a week of endless parties, although the joy of leaving is tempered by nostalgia and the imminent parting of friends.

Families and friends flooded Annapolis, and the Academy put on its best show for the visitors. The week was full of excitment and celebration. It included dinner cruises, garden party, graduation ball, blue angels, parade, and parade practices, made even more onerous by the parties on the night before that often carried over into the early morning. Families wanted to see everything that the Academy had to offer and eager onlookers packed the yard as the Blue Angels [illegible] zoomed overhead.

Commissioning week kicked off as the plebes [illegible] Herndon in order to become fourth-class midshipmen. The second class baptized their rings and danced the night away at ring dance, and who could ever forget the crazy [illegible] luau. But the main focus of the week was the [illegible] commissioned first class. Graduation brought [illegible] week long festivities as the newly commissioned officers transitioned into the fleet and the midshipmen [illegible] for summer training and leave, but the memories will always remain.

Ring Dance
A Night to Remember



The night has finally come! After a couple months of looking at their rings but not being able to wear them, the Second Class were now allowed the privilege of wearing their piece of Academy tradition. Though some of the class were already away on cruise, a few of those that were in Norfolk came up for the event. The traditional grand explosive ring [illegible] was very good and [illegible] time. [illegible] the Second Class [illegible] defined [illegible] Commissioning Week.

The footbridge was lit up with Christmas-style lights and the red carpet was rolled out. The Electric Brigade played their usual great selection of covers as the Class of 2005 danced the night away. A trio of second class even did their own routine to the Outkast hit, "I Like the Way You Move." As the night continued to heat up under the ballroom/tent, the Second Class refreshed themselves and their dates by taking a scenic walk along the banks of the Severn. The fireworks display was breathtaking. It was definitely a night to remember and a great way to start off Commissioning Week.

Graduation

The day we've all been waiting for...

On the morning of May 28, an air of excitement filled Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium. For four long and tedious years, dreams of this day had been all that kept some midshipmen going. Proud friends and families flocked to the stadium to watch their loved ones graduate and receive their commission in either the United States Navy or Marine Corps. Faculty and staff of the Naval Academy joined such distinguished guests as the Secretary of the Navy, the Chief of Naval Operations, the Commandant of the Marine Corps, and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The graduating [illegible] restlessly as speeches from distinguished guests seemed to go on forever, but finally it was time for them to take the oath of office and their passage across the stage to receive their diplomas. The graduates leaped and shouted across the stage in their relief and excitement at finally having finished. The ceremony ended with the traditional tossing of the covers as the graduates proudly cast away their old midshipman covers in order to replace them with their new officer's ones. Joy to be [illegible] mingled with sadness at the impending separation of close friends as the newly commissioned officers filed out of the Madison Auditorium to their families and put on their new insignia. From college [illegible] of the graduates as their time at the Naval Academy [illegible] close and they move on to the fleet. Under second year head coach Paul Johnson, the Navy Midshipmen looked to rebound from a 2-10 campaign in fall 2002. With many returning starters back off the squad, the Midshipmen entered the season with much confidence.

In the opening game of the season, the Mids hosted VMI Keydets. The Midshipmen came out of the blocks quickly and dominated the Keydets [illegible]. This win marked the first home win in over three years for the Midshipmen. Navy then traveled to [illegible] to face the TCU Horned Frogs [illegible] week 2. The game was close for [illegible] with Navy leading 3-0 at [illegible]. The tide quickly turned in [illegible] second half as Navy could not [illegible] against [illegible] Horned Frog defense. [illegible] Week, the [illegible] Army fought [illegible] Annapolis. With [illegible] looking to [illegible] Navy's [illegible] played a great [illegible] all cylinders winning 39-7. Game four of the season brought the Midshipmen to Piscataway, NJ to take on the Rutgers Scarlet Knights. This game was back and forth for most of the game until the third quarter when Navy fell apart. The Scarlet Knights blocked a field goal and returned it for a touchdown, putting a dagger in the heart of the Midshipmen. Rutgers came out on top 48-27.

The first leg in the Commander-in-Chief's trophy started in Landover, MD against the Air Force Falcons. The Falcons came into the came flying high but were quickly grounded in a humbling 28-25 loss at the hands of Navy. At 3-2, Navy marched into Nashville to do battle with the Vanderbilt Commodores. Despite being down at halftime, Navy found some second half strength and pulled out a 37-27 upset against the Commodores on their homecoming.

Week seven matched the Mids against the Rice Owls from the WAC conference. Navy easily proved that its options was far superior on this hot day in Houston winning 38-6. Navy encountered a disaster on homecoming in Annapolis. The unbeaten Delaware Blue Hens took advantage of three Navy turnovers and upset the Midshipmen 21-17.

Looking to bounce back after a terrible loss, Navy hosted the high-powered Tulane Green Wave. Tulane boasted two possible NFL draft picks on offense, but Navy showed that its offense was the one that could not be stopped. The Midshipmen rolled back into the win column with a 35-17 victory.

The 6-3 Midshipmen busted into to South Bend to try and break a 39 year curse. Unfortunately, this was not the year that the Irish would fall. A last second field goal soared through the uprights, made the score 27-24, and helped the Irish squeak out another win over Navy.

Navy came out swinging in their last home game of 2003. The Central Michigan Chippewas could not stay on the same field as Navy proved to be too powerful once again, winning 63-34.

Cheerleading

This 99-'00 season's year brought waves of change for Navy Cheerleading. From the coaches of the year we saw new coaches, new leadership, new uniforms, and a new team. All the home games were great, ad [illegible] and helping the Brigade cheer on Navy [illegible]. With wins against WMU, Eastern Michigan, Tulane, and beating Air Force, there was only one thing left to do. On December 6th, we beat Army to take the Commander-in-Chief's trophy and sealed our bid for a bowl game. Through all the bad times, good times, crazy times, we were [illegible]. Thanks for a great year, best of luck in the future.1-2-3 CHEER NAVY!

Although the outcome wasn't what we would have liked, the Sprint Football team had another great season, placing second in the Collegiate Sprint Football league. Captains 1/C Brett Jones and 1/C Chris Zachary, along with the 20 other seniors helped lead the way this season and provided much needed experience throughout the lineup. This year's seniors extended our winning streak to 17 straight games over the last three seasons before falling to Army in a hard fought N-Star game. The seniors also aided in the defeat of Princeton in our final game on Rip Miller Field. Under the direction of Major Jerome Rizzo, USMC, we also won our third straight Pride Bowl championship with a win over Army early in the season and placed 19 players on the ALL-CSFL League Team. We were stacked full of younger talent this season as well, which should make for an exciting off-season lifting and conditioning program and carry on to next season where we plan to reclaim our position at the top of the CSFL.

Whoever said that a season could be summed up with a team's win-loss record never met a Navy Volleyball player. We started the season with fewer experienced players and faced several injuries and cancelled games. But all things considered, we could not be prouder to be part of NWV. We may have lost some, but you can't win them all. And oh did we fight! We fought and we fought hard; we fought day in and day out; we fought every game win or lose. Go NWV!

This was a rebuilding year. We graduated 8 out of 11 starters last year but brought in 15 freshman. Having only 4 seniors and 2 juniors we were a very young team. We had a tough start to our season, losing five out of the first six games. We battled back to beat Army and put ourselves in contention for the Patriot League Tournament. This was a tough team with alot of heart.

Senior leadership was crucial to our success this year and the team will regret the loss of Seniors Daniel Urbanczyk, Jaimie Coyle, Matt Sanchez and Captain Ryan Peters. The outlook for next season is looking great and with this season as a base, there is no limit to the success of next year's team.

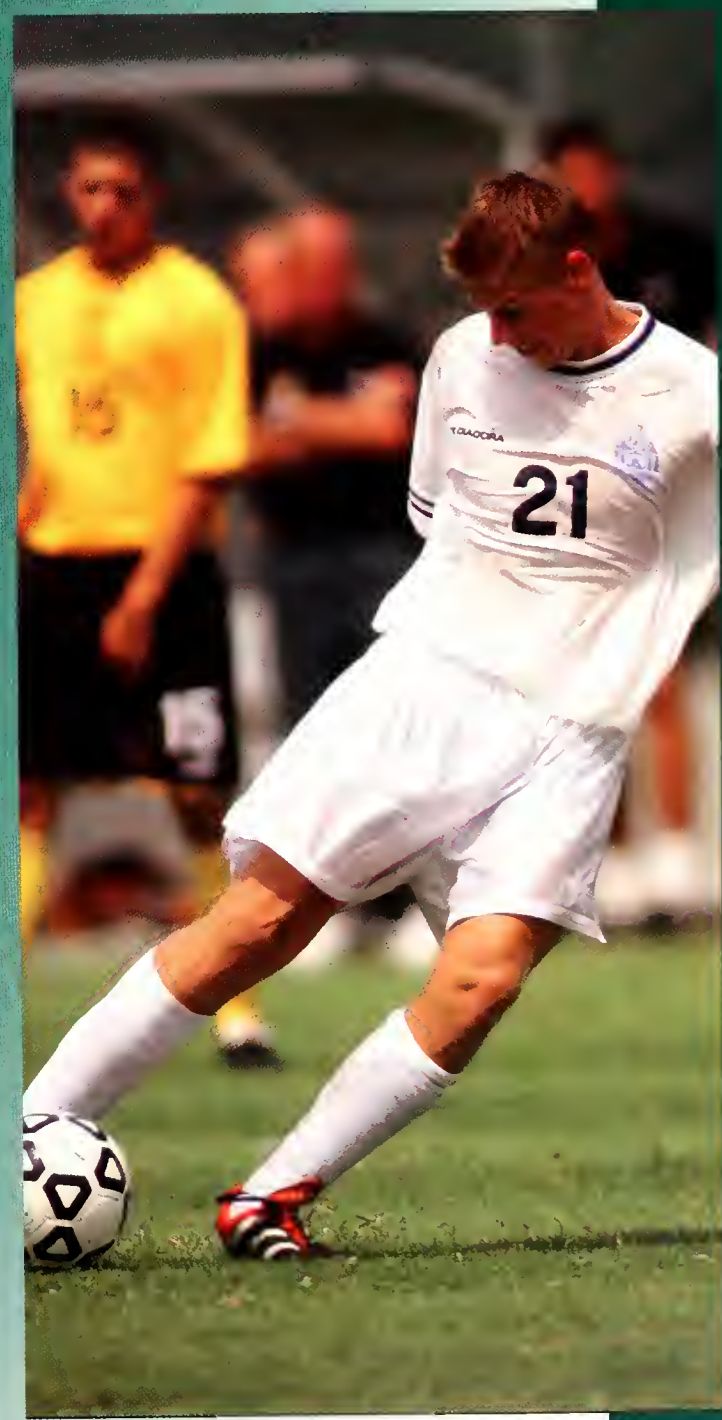
Men's Soccer



The Navy Women's soccer team started out on a mission after the previous undefeated season. The goal: to be the first women's sports team to earn a birth into the NCAA Tournament in the history of women's sports at the Naval Academy. Led by all-time leader scorer and points leader Stacey Finley and 2nd Team All Patriot League forward Amelia Sheveland on the attack, the Midshipmen were also known for their impenetrable defense. Kim Bonafede, also a 2nd Team pick, held a 1.02 GAA throughout the season and Xochi Piedra was a 2nd Team All-Mid-Atlantic selection.

The season started off well for the Navy women, especially after the close 1-0 loss to the top ranked UNC women's team. They tore through their Patroit League opponents, eventually winning the league title with a 4-1 victory over American University. Though their season ended in a NCAA first round loss to Penn State, the Navy Women's Soccer team had accomplished more than any team prior.

"A wise coach once said that a good cross country team is like holding a hot hand in poker," notes head coach Al Cantello."Right now Navy is holding a full house and four of a kind beats that.We have three solid runners with a wealth of experience but we're looking for two more."

This season, Eric Eckstrand, Erik Schmidt and Joshua Sink, were those top three runners. After training hard all summer, they hope to peak at the perfect time and be an integral part of guiding the entire squad.

The Men's Cross Country team finished the season 2nd in the Patriot League. Men's Basketball

The 2003-2004 Men's Basketball season was one of hard work and growth. The senior leadership was able to pull together a good basketball team and charge through the season at full speed. Having learned much throughout the season, Navy pulled off key wins against Lafayette and Army at the end of the season. The team went into the Patriot League Tournament charged and confident. A 60-62 loss to Lehigh ended the team's journey through the tournament.

It was a season of suffered losses, but the team kept a positive attitude throughout the year. To the seniors, farewell and thank you for giving us some special moments during your time as a part of Navy Basketball. To the underclass, keep charging and let's see it happen next year under new head coach Army Lange!

Women's Basketball

Navy Blue and Gold. BEAT ARMY!!

The season of 2003-2004 Navy Women's Basketball was filled with ups and downs. However, as we get old and gray, we'll look back on the seasons with fond memories and kind words.

Though we didn't win a game in Hawaii, we let Texas know that we don't [illegible] ships, gave Arizona and Shaq a run for their money, and were labeled the most well dressed team at the banquet, stunning everyone in our summer whites.

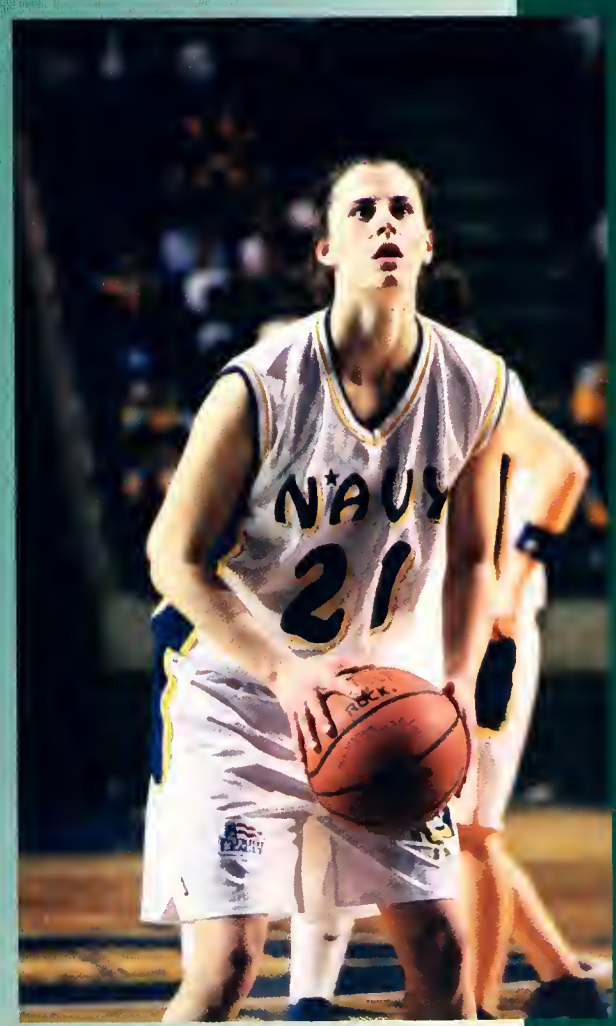
Thanks to Coach Woolfolk's conditioning and our newfound movement in practices, we didn't keel over playing over a mile high in Wyoming.

Beating Army as firsties at home is something '04 will always cherish, plus we managed to beat Bucknell and Holy Cross for the first time in our careers.

Though we all would have liked things to turn out better, we all grew as people and as teammates. You guys mean the world to me, and I urge each and every one of you to push yourselves to become better individual and team players.

Basketball players are made in the offseason. The hardest thing for '04 has been to let our teammates go as we go on to do bigger things.

We thank everyone for the smiles, laughter, and memories. Work hard, play hard, and use credit cards responsibly.



Team Captain, 1/C Courtney Davidson, from the freethrow line.

The 2003-2004 season was one of the greatest in Navy team history. Under the leadership of first-year head coach Bill Roberts and venerable assistant McGee Moody, the men posted an 8-9 record, with Navy victorious over the Patriot League teams in every competition. The first half of the season culminated in December, as the men defeated Army in N-star competition for the thirteenth straight year, besting the Black Knights by a score of 151-92. While the dual-meet season had its ups and downs, the team had a very impressive run in their two post-season competitions, the Patriot League and Eastern Intercollegiate Swim League (EISL) championships. Navy's dominance of the Patriot league during the dual meet season extended to the championships, as the men got a huge lead on day one and never looked back, besting second place Bucknell University by 280 points by the end of competition. Kevin Mukri, Noah White, diver Kevin Teague, and Terrence Fenningham all gained individual titles, with White qualifying automatically for NCAA championships in the 50 freestyle. Amazing as these individual accomplishments sound, the real story of the Patriot League meet was the Navy relays, as the men re-wrote the Patriot League, pool, and team record books on their way to winning all five relay events, and qualifying two for NCAA national championships. While the command in the Patriot League was expected, the EISL championship meet was a different story. During the dual meet season, Army was the only EISL team that the men defeated, and they entered the meet heavy underdogs in one of the fastest swimming conferences in the country. The Navy sprinters led the way on the first day of competition, placing three swimmers in the top eight of the 50 freestyle, and a fifth place overall finish. The team fell back to seventh on day two, yet came back strong on day three. Swimming and diving with a purpose from the first event to the last, day three of the EISL championships may have been the best overall performance the team produced all season. The sprinters again led the way, totaling 73 points in the 100 freestyle alone, highlighted by Noah White and Joe Smutz's 2-3 finish. Kevin Teague, coming in a fourth place finish in the one meter diving event, won the three meter event to become Navy's only individual title winner of the meet. In possibly the most emotional swim of the season, the Navy men took victory in the last and marquee event of the meet, the 400 freestyle relay, as the team of Joe Smutz, Marshall Boyd, Terrence Fenningham, and Noah White defeated the team champions and host Princeton by over a second, and tied the pool record. Although the men's sixth place finish may seem meager in comparison to their Patriot League title, their strong performances in one of the best conferences in the nation gave them great confidence as they sent five members of their team to Long Island, New York to compete in the NCAA national championships. Swimmers Terrence Fenningham, Mike Linn, Noah White and Joe Smutz, and diver Kevin Teague made their teammates back in Annapolis very proud, as the relay teams returned with two All-American honorable mentions, the first since Navy's Ian Johnston in 1996. All said, the season was truly one of the greatest in team history, and will be the benchmark for teams in the years to come.

Women's Swimming

Led by the class of 2004, the Navy Women's Swim Team finished their season placing third at the Patriot League Championships. Captain Natalie Schultz and seniors Allison Moon, Leigh Wallace, Katie Kelly, Jessica Box, and BJ Matlock led the team to their fifteenth consecutive victory over Army.

In addition to an 8-6 record and wins over Colgate and Lehigh, outstanding individual performances this season include Aubra Thomas, who broke the team and Patriot League record in the 200 breaststroke and 200 IM and Tori Throckmorton, posting record-setting times in the 100 fly, back and free. With such strong performances and much of the team returning next season, Navy Women's Swimming will be sure to dominate the pool in 2005, led by an astounding incoming senior class.

The seniors would like to especially thank Hoss, Chris, and CAPT Avers, each of whom has been an incrediable source of support this season. We will miss you all!

The Mids tumbled into the 2004 season with every gymnast returning from last year. Senior captain Peter Langley, who was side-lined most of his junior year due to surgery, came back strong and with the desire to lead the team all the way until the end. Fellow seniors David Vogelgesang and Drew Barker would help him along the way. Vogelgesang, who earned the most improved gymnast award at last year's conference championship, was looking better than ever as he hoped to be Navy's most consistent all-aroud competitor for the 2004 season. Barker, also a veteran all-around competitor, made significant improvements in the off-season and would help the Mids with his clean gymnastics. Also returning this season were juniorJosh Blackman and sophomores Grant Regelin and Ben Peterman. The three are returning from a strong 2003 season where each competed in the all-around at the NCAA championship meet. Freshman Sean Blackman would be a national contender on the rings, while his classmate, Matt Beaudette, would help the team on the floor excercise.

The team opened this season with an impressive victory over 12th ranked William &Mary. Trailing by over two points in the final rotation, the Mids posted six strong high bar routines to overcome the gap and win by only .05 points. This victory embodied the spirit of the team and was a preview of the season to come. Other accomplishments include some of the highest team scores any of the gymnasts have seen in the past four years. The Mids scored their season highs of 210.6 and 207.25 at home, as well as a 206.5 on the road. To wrap up the regular season, the team put on a good show at the Conference Championship. Coming off a tough floor rotation, the team put up their highest team pommel horse scores of the season (35.3) to keep them in the game. Navy finished the championship in fifth place, one spot higher than the previous year. Vogelgesang had the meet of his career and ended fifth in the all-around. In the end, four Mids qualified to compete at the NCAA championships: Vogelgesang in the all-around, Barker and Peterman on the pommel horse and Josh Blackman on the high bar, vault and rings.

The post-season proved to be most enjoyable for the Mids, as they headed to Texas to compete in the USA national collegiate championships. Although most of the team was battered and bruised after a long, tough season, they mustered the strength to finish 2nd place, beating Air Force and Springfield College. This is the best finish the seniors have ever seen at this meet. Navy also represented every event in the finals competition. Senior [illegible] Langley, who finished his career with one of the best meets of his life, qualified on four events and snagged three all-American titles. Josh Blackman finished with two all-American [illegible] while Peterman earned one.

The USNA Wrestling team had an outstanding season this year. Led by the Class of 2004 and senior captain Mike Barikian, the team posted a 12-4 record this season and had five EIWA place-winners. Three wrestlers qualified for the NCAA Championships: Tanner Garrett (285 lbs), Mike Barikian (165 lbs), and Nate Gulosh (141 lbs).

The team also placed first overall at the All-Academy Championships with 107.0 team points, with the Citadel in second place with 83.0 points.

The seniors can look back on their final year in wrestling and know that it was an incredible one. Now it's up to the undeclass to keep the momentum going. Good luck next season!

Squash

The 2003-2004 Navy Varsity Squash Team had an excellent season this year. Producing wins all throughout the season, the team finished the season with an overall record of 20 and 12 which placed them 15th overall in the country. Highlight wins include beating Dennison early on in the season and also beating Franklin and Marshall 5-4 at the end of the season after losing to them early on on November.

There were standout performances throughout the season as members from every spot on the ladder stepped up at crucial times to help propel the team to victory. Individual performances include Navy 2/C Mike Rogers's win which clinched the end of the eason victory over Franklin and Marshall, 2/C Luke Korans back to back wins against Trinity and Yale, the number one and two teams respectively. Also worth mentioning is 2/C Gavin Morrison who played the number one spot on the ladder all season long, a tough spot to fill. His superb season was capped off when he finished 52nd individually as one of the top ranked players in the country.

The team looks to be strong next year with new recruits coming in that will be able to push quickly for spots on the ladder. Expect great things from the team next season!

The 2004 Navy men's lacrosse team earned its place in the record books as one of the best teams in the program's history. The team under the astute direction of National Coach of the Year Richie Meade proved itself to be one of the best in the nation. Meade directed the 2004 Midshipmen to one of their most successful seasons in the storied history of Navy lacrosse, as Navy won a school-record 15 games en route to its first National Championship Game appearance since 1975. Along the way, the Midshipmen defeated top-ranked Maryland in College Park, Navy's first documented win over a #1-ranked team. Navy maintained its #2 national ranking throughout the remainder of the season. Navy easily won the Patriot League Tournament to earn an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament. The Midshipmen quickly gained the admiration and respect of the entire nation as they battled through the NCAA Tournament. Navy defeated Penn in the first round by a dominating 11-5 score. In a hard fought second round battle, Navy defeated seventh-seeded Cornell on their home turf. In the coveted Final Four, Navy beat eighth-ranked Princeton, 8-7 to earn their place in the NCAA Championship game. What a year for Navy Golf!

The year started with a memorable tourament for Captain Billy Hurley in the Navy Fall Invitational, shooting a final round 61 and setting the Navy course and tournament record, falling one shot shy of tying the lowest single round in collegiate golf. The team took a solid 5th place. In their last Army/Navy match, the three seniors, Billy Hurley, Joey Kistler, and Rob Stochel, completed their fourth straight N-Star Victory and the team's sixth straight over Army. Two of the plebes on the team, Jeremy Garner and Bryan Stoniecki, contributed a huge chunk of the points won by winning a combined 2.5 points. Second Class Braxton Mashburn and BJ Brumley won a doubles point for Navy and Hurley split his singles match and won a point with Rocky Novellino in the doubles. Stochel split his singles match winning the last two holes to clinch the N-Star match. In Dallas at the Service Academy Classic, Hurley won the individual title by a record 13 shots and joined Joey Kistler in making the All Service Academy team. Navy finished 2nd place. In the spring season, the Navy team made a solid finish despite struggling in the second round. The first round Rocky Novellino shot his first collegiate round under 70 with a 69. Billy Hurley took another top 5 finish. In difficult and cold conditions, freshmen Mike Pierce, Bryan Stoniecki, and Rob Eidson competed in one of their first matches outside of the Navy course. Pierce played solid golf. Billy Hurley, after shooting 75 in the first round, fired a comeback 66 to win by one shot to claim medalist honors. At the Patriot League Tournament, Billy Hurley won the individual title while Rob Stochel finished in third place. Coach Pat Owen was selected Patriot League Co-Coach of the Year. Senior Rob Stochel earned all-conference status, while classmate Billy Hurley continued one of the most outstanding years ever enjoyed by a Naval Academy athlete. Hurley had entered his final two semesters on the Navy golf team, a strong showing at the U.S. Amateur Championship last summer. Hurley was named Most Outstanding Golfer of the Patriot League Tournament and Honorable Mention All-America. He qualified for the NCAA Tournament and was selected for the U.S. Palmer Cup Team, as one of the nation's top eight collegians matched to compete against their counterparts from Europe.

The 2004 Navy Baseball team had a disappointing year with a record of 12-32, after being the 2nd place team in the Patriot League in 2003. This year's team is summed up well by a quote from former professional football player Jack Kemp, "Every team requires unity. A team has to move as one unit, one force, with each person understanding and assisting the roles of his teammates. You win or lose as a team, as a family." For the six seniors: Dean Farmer, Andy Froistad, Craig Candeto,Chris Ashinhurst, Marcus Craig, and Justin Jackson this is the end of the road.

Despite the many disappointing moments during this tough season, Navy had its fair share of highlights as well. Down 8-1 against Lafayette going into the fourth inning, Navy battled back to win 10-9. Head Coach Steve Whitmyer noted this as "one of Navy baseball's great comebacks." Other memorable moments include: Candeto's homerun saving catch over the wall, freshman J.P. Temperilli leading the team in homeruns, a 4-2 win over rival Old Dominion, winning 3 out of 4 games verses Holy Cross, and the emergence of freshman pitchers Dan Kovalcik and Burgess Nichols.

In the words of Bob Feller, "Every day is a new opportunity. You can build on yesterday's success or put its failures behind and start over again. That's the way life is, with [illegible] game every day, and that's the way baseball is." This year's [illegible] disappointments have bound the team together into tight [illegible] ing confidence to those [illegible] next year who know what the [illegible] endured and what [illegible]

The Outdoor Men's Track team had an impressive season. The team traveled up to West Point to take on Army in the annual star match and returned home with another star. Coming from behind, they claimed the N-Star match by a score of 105-98. The team went on to place second at the Patriot League Championships and qualified six individuals for the Regional NCAA Championships. Senior and team-captain, Nate Michael went on to qualify for the National Championships in the discus and placed 18th. Earlier in the season, Michael also set a school record in the event with a personal best throw of 54.55 meters (178'11").

Major contributors throughout the seasons were: seniors Nate Michael, Erik Schmidt, Bobby Sparks, Eric Porter and Adesina Ekundayo; juniors Ralph Lufkin and Kyle Obrock; sophomores Josh Sink and Sam Spletzer; and freshmen Trey Hines, Cole Herron, and Stephen White. 2nd LT Erik Schmidt went on to qualify and compete in the Olympic Trials in the 1500 meters along with 2003 graduate ENS Aaron Lanzel.

More Navy runners in the lead.

This tennis season started off with a bang as the Midshipmen jumped to a 9-1 record. Behind the leadership of senior captain Ryan Osgood and the mature play of freshman Stanley Kahl, the season appeared a promising one. As the majority of the team struggled through the middle of the season, sophomore Brandon Carter stepped up his game at #3 singles and junior Davy Lee inspired the team with his consistent play.

Intercollegiate Sailing

The women's team did extremely well this year. During the fall season, 1/c Alexa Bestoso qualified for the Women's Singlehanded Championship and then went on to finish 5th at the championship. Navy was not finished in the top five in this championship in the last five years. Also, the Women's team was ranked as high as 5th in the nation this past year. Their most extradinary accomplishment was how they did at Women's Doublehanded Nationals in Oregon this past May. The Women's team qualifying for nationals is in itself a tremendous honor. They took 3rd at nationals as well as 1/c Bestoso being awarded All-American honorable mention.

The co-ed team also had some highlights from this season. 1/c Justin Smith, 1/c Bobby Anderson, 3/c John Keith, 4/c Gary Grimes and 4/c Slava Haywas were ranked as high as 9th in the nation and finished 2nd at the prestigious Nevins regatta this fall. Both C and D divisions did very well at the Truxton Umsted regatta. 1/c Justin Smith, Team Captain, finished 3rd in the C division and 2/c Nick Vanwagoner with the help of 3/c Ryan Shaugnessy won his division.

Overall, the Intercollegiate Sailing Team had a great year and it could not have been possible without the help of all of it's 35 team members.

After not reaching the team goals of the 2003 spring season the squad returned with a new hunger. Right away it was apparent that many of the rowers had put a lot of work in over the summer. Coupled with a strong freshman class, the boats were looking fast for the fall racing season. Quickly the strength and depth of the program was apparent. The team placed first at the Occoquan Challenge and the Navy Day Regatta in Philadelphia. The varsity traveled to Boston to row in the Head of the Charles, finishing 5th overall and 3rd among the college crews. The fall season culminated with the Princeton Chase at Princeton where the team placed 3rd overall.

When the team moved indoors to start an intense period of winter training, they brought the same winning attitude in from the water. Each day was filled with hard work and impressive performances. The early appearance of spring boosted everyone's spirits. Spring Training helped refocus the team to begin the spring season. The focus paid off with wins over Princeton, Yale, Rutgers, and Columbia. Club Sports

Hockey

This past year we made some major strides as a team. We beat some top ranked teams including Delaware, Arizona, Towson, and Washington and Jefferson. We are truly going to miss the graduating seniors for the skill and the leadership they brought to this team over their 4 years. We are extremely optimistic about next year, for we will have a lot of senior leadership and a talented, and now experienced, youngster class. So, our expectations are very high going into the 2004-2005 season.

Boxing

Cycling

The dedicated Midshipmen of the Navy Cycling team continued to exert their prowess in competition during the 2004 season of the Atlantic Coast Collegiate Cycling Conference. After months of preparation on the saddle, Navy Cycling opened its season in March at home and would race throughout the spring in Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, and West Virginia. Through extremes in hot, cold, leg-grinding ascents and heart-stopping descents, Navy rode fast, hard, and long to find victories every race weekend. Under the leadership of team captain MIDN 1/C Matthew Becker and the experienced riders of the elite fields, the team saw unity grow through the season to culminate in a third-place finish in the ACCCC and the trip of four Navy Cyclists to the national collegiate championships—MIDN 3/C Jean Hyde and Mitchell Clement and MIDN 2/C Jake Bauer and Ryan Tuttle. Individual excellence was exhibited by MIDN 3/C Hyde, who single handedly dominated the elite women's field, MIDN 3/C Clement, the conference champion in the junior men's field, and by upcoming MIDN 4/C Andrew Lawrence and Christine Taranto, with third-place and second-place finishes in the men's and women's novice fields, respectively. With the foundations of past and present success and continued upcoming talent, Navy Cycling is looking to further its ascendancy in collegiate cycling.

Powerlifting

This year, the Navy Powerlifting Team has been recovering from losing many key members from the class of 2003, but there are several standouts to look for in the near future. At the Armed Service/Maryland State Championship, 3/C Dara Ching stood out with a first place in the 165 weight class and was the best overall female lifter on the meet. 3/C Jason Bowers also came through with first place and best overall male lifter in the 181 weight class. Since then, 17 people on the team have qualified for the National Collegiate Powerlifting Competition, including 4/C Nicholas Cincotta, who has had an impressive start in the 123 weight class. Returning to Nationals to represent Navy are 3/C Frederic Fields, Dara Ching, Jason Bowers, Cliff Adams, 2/C Lindsay Windham, 1/C Anthony Sisti, Lauren Goldenberg, Mitch Newton, Thomas Duff, and Jennifer Bloom.

Women's Tennis

Navy Women's Club Tennis tied the season with a 4-4 record. Despite not having our own tennis courts for afternoon practice because of Physics trailers and frequent rain outs, the girls were able to find time to play and keep the team going. The team was led by Captain 1/C Natalie Frantz and Co-captain 1/C Brenna Montgomery, and the team included 1/C Ashley Greene, 1/C Sarah Haengel, 1/C Jess Pommerer, 2/C Hillary Nelson, 3/C Ruthie Gaunt, 3/C Katie Gerhard, 3/C Hannah Jayroe, 3/C Kristen Saunders, 3/C Sharon Wildberger, 4/C Tamara Alvarado, 4/C Lisa McKinnon, and 4/C Dorothy Van Duyne. The team was coached by Coach Christine Copper and Assistant Coach LT Brigitte Wallace, USN, and the officer representative was Captain Nora Pencola, USMC.

Men's Volleyball

The 2003-2004 Men's Volleyball Team had a tremendous season, earning 3 regular season tournament championships and one second place finish. Traveling around the country, the young team sowed incredible promise for the next few years. Led by team captain Pat Lobner, with senior Libero Brian Storjohann and senior opposite Jeremy Bartowitz contributing, Navy showed its best season ever in several years. Though playing far below their ability in Charlotte for the National Championships, Navy still earned a very proud finish in Division I. The team looks forward to seeing big power hitting in Marshall Pagaling and Carlon Haywood, and the consistent play of John Hoy.

Navy Women's Rugby

Co-captains Bridget Seymour and Annie Cox led the Navy Women's Rugby team to victory this fall with an undefeated league record. In late September, the lady ruggers competed against their biggest rival, Penn State, in perhaps the most intense game of the Navy Women's Rugby history. Navy started the game focused and overwhelmed Penn State by scoring a try within minutes of the kickoff. Navy's teamwork and unrelenting spirit throughout the game was due to the leadership of seniors Bridget Seymour, Annie Cox, Lindsey Bellomy, Laura Perazzola, Jen Grob, Marty Messer, Laurie Solber, and Candice Sarlese. The lady ruggers spent the winter preparing for their championship season and due to their hardwork and determination, they made it to the final four in the spring.

Combat Arms Team

The Combat Arms Team is a very small and close-knit group. Members learn and practice tactical shooting with a variety of small arms, including the M-16 service rifle, M-4 carbine, M-249 squad automatic weapon, Mosberg shotgun, and the MP-5. The weapon that they are most proficient with and use primarily is the 9mm Sig Saur P-228 pistol. CAT members practice move-and-shoot tactics and scenarios which demand quick draws from the holster and rapid magazine changes. The Combat Arms Team competes in weekend International Defensive Pistol association Matches and the Inter Service Small Arms Competition-where it is the defending champion of the Service Academy Trophy. The team also competes in a Multi-Service Academy meet hosted each year by Smith and Wesson. These competitions and the team's training emhasize the type of small arms proficiency that will greatly benefit members in their upcoming naval careers.

Men's Soccer

Softball

The 2004 Navy Women's Softball team had one of the most succesful seasons in history. The highlights of the season include travelling to Jacksonville, FL and hosting the first annual Navy Invitational tournament. The team beat their rival, UVA, 2-1 to take 1st Place at Virginia's own tournament. In April of 2004, the Navy Women's club softball team took a group of 13 to the national championships held in Chino, CA. Faced with many challenges along the way, Navy lost to the Southern California Cougars in the first game. Unfazed, they battled back for the next few rounds in order to have the chance at the national championship title again. Led by 1/C Holly Siebel, Navy came back and dominated. The team's determination to win combined with their dedication to softball earned them the title of 2004 National Club Softball Champions.

Navy Triathlon

National Champions in 2002 and 2003, the USNA Triathlon Team began this year with high hopes to regain their title. In the fall, the team raced at the Lancaster Triathlon in Pennsylvania, the Outback Big Lick Triathlon in Virginia, and the Osprey Sprint Triathlon in Maryland. Brandon Secrest was the fastest of the field at Lancaster as he won the race. The next Navy man was Nathan Brasher who finished in 5th place. For the women, Melanie Cooper finished 3rd overall followed by Maraline Mejias who finished 24th. The Outback Big Lick Triathlon, also the Mid-Atlantic Collegiate Championships, was held the day after Hurricane Isabel moved through Annapolis. The team raced none the less, and the men placed 2nd behind Army by 1 minute and 5 seconds with the women finishing in 4th. Brandon Secrest was the fastest finisher once again with a time of 2:02:01 placing second in the Collegiate Male category. He was followed by Josh McCann who crossed the line in 7th. Melanie Cooper was the fastest female for Navy, finishing 7th in the Collegiate Female category with a time of 2:30:10. She was followed by Ashley Garner who crossed the line in 18th. Naval Academy triathletes returned from the Osprey Sprint Triathlon with a double victory for both male and female overall titles. For the men, Nathan Brasher was the fastest of the field with a time of 1:04:43, and Melanie Cooper grabbed the women's title with a time of 1:18:15.

After a successful fall season, the team trained over the course of the winter to prepare for spring races in Clermont, Florida, Lake Havasu, Arizona, and Columbia, Maryland. At the Tri-America Clermont Triathlon, Brandon Secrest finished 4th overall with a time of 2:02:18. Navy's next finisher was Nathan Brasher who finished 13th overall. For the women, Justine Whipple was the fastest Navy finisher at 4th overall with a time of 2:20:57. Navy's next finisher was Melanie Cooper who was 6th overall with a time of 2:21:05. With these performances, the Navy men won with men's team title there by 4 minutes over its closest rival, and the Navy women won the women's team title by a margin of 18 minutes. At the National Collegiate Championships, Navy's top finishers were Matthew Welch who finished 39th and Brandon Secrest who finished 34th. If

by: Rudyard Kipling

If you can keep you head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you
But make allowance for their doubting too,

If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated, don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise:

If you can dream-- and not make dreams your master,
If you can think-- and not make thoughts you aim;
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same;

If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools:

If you can make one head of all your winnings
And risk it all on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings
And never breath a word about your loss;

If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew
To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on when there is nothing in you
Except the Will which says to them: "Hold on!"

If you can talk with crowds and keep you virtue,
Or walk with kings-- nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you;
If all men count with you, but none too much,

If you can fill the unforgiving minute

With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,

Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,

And-- which is more-- you'll be a Man, my son!

PIPES & DRUMS

The Pipes and Drums establish a military pipe band as a component of the Brigade of Midshipmen. The Pipes and Drums consist of bagpipers, highland drummers and highland dancers.

The primary mission of this pipe band is to field a performing band capable of providing highland musical support to the evolutions of the Brigade of Midshipmen, as well as the activities of the larger academy community (alumni and parents clubs), both on and off the Yard.

In addition to providing a performing band, this BSA provides interested Midshipmen with musical instruction in bagpiping, highland drumming (snare, tenor and bass), and highland dancing.

Lastly, the band serves as representatives of the Brigade at activities off the Yard. In this secondary capacity, the Pipes and Drums support both the Academy's public relations and recruiting efforts. This support is in the form of performances by either the full band, portions thereof, or solo bagpipers.

Drum & Bugle Corps

The Naval Academy Drum & Bugle Corps was founded in 1914, and is currently the oldest active drum and bugle corps in the world. The corps performs over 200 times a year in support of the Brigade of Midshipmen and Navy athletics.This year's field show featured the powerful Latin opener, "A Mis Abuelos" by jazz great Arturo Sandoval. The show continued with "Con Te Partiro", an opera aria by Andrea Bocelli, and concluded with the drum corps classic, "Malaguena" by Ernesto Lecuona. During the spring, the concert repertoire also included "American Salute", by Morton Gould, and a patriotic march entitled, "American Trilogy". All performances were conducted by MIDN 2/c John Weier.The corps traveled far and wide during the year, including performances at the Houston Bowl, a concert in St. Petersburg, Florida and a Mardi Gras parade in Mobile, Alabama. The corps was also a crowd favorite at the annual "Serenade in Brass" drum corps concert in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.The corps is under the direction of Mr. Jeff Weir, and the officer representative is Captain Glen Sears, USNA Class of '82.

Gospel Choir

The United States Naval Academy (USNA) Gospel Choir is an upbeat inspirational musical ensemble. Comprised of midshipmen from various places, races, and creeds, the Gospel Choir is truly reflective of the diverse interests and ethnicities within the Brigade of Midshipmen. Their common bond is musical talent and passion to praise God through song. Throughout the year, the USNA Gospel Choir maintains an active performance schedule. The Choir regularly performs at the Naval Academy for Sunday Chapel services, special conferences, and seasonal concerts. Other venues include: other churches, schools, and community centers. The USNA Gospel Choir also conducts two annual tours during the Martin Luther King Jr. Holiday Weekend and Spring Break.

Men's and Women's Glee Club

The Men's Glee Club is the largest of the Naval Academy's musical organizations. They have appeared on several network television shows, most notably for The Presidential Inaugural Galas (CBS) and Kennedy Center Honors (CBS), Christmas in Washington and The Today Show (NBC), and Good Morning America (ABC). They participate in annual performances of Handel's Messiah. They have performed masterpieces of the choral-orchestra literature with the Naval Academy Women's Glee Club and the Annapolis Symphony Orchestra including Orff's Carmina Burana, Mozart's and Brahm's Requiem, Haydn's Lord Nelson Mass, and the Verdi Requiem, all part of the Naval Academy's Distinguished Artist Series. During the past four years, the Men's Glee Club has performed in California, Connecticut, Florida, Louisiana, Maryland, Ohio, Nevada, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Italy, Sicily, and England. Each year, these midshipmen represent the Navy and the Naval Academy with pride and distinction in schools, colleges, churches, cathedrals, and many of our country's finest concert halls. The United States Naval Academy Women's Glee Club began as an suxiliary to the Men's Glee Club when, in 1976, women first entered the Naval Academy. The women have performed across America and internationally, including tours to Florida, Hawaii, California, Texas, New York, Rome, and London. The Women's Glee Club's varied repertoire includes sacred selections, folk songs, patriotic music, and popular Broadway tunes.

Protestant Midshipmen Club

The mission of the Protestant Midshipmen Club is to reach out to the Brigade of Midshipmen and to provide an environment of Christian fellowship, discipleship, and spiritual development. We proclaim the word of Christ and develop ourselves as Christian ambassadors to the Fleet and the Marine Corps. This year we have had many events such as two retreats, guest speakers including retired Admiral Charles Larson, Admiral Hank Chiles, the re-known Christian theologian Ravi Zacharias, and our past Commandant BGEN John R. Allen, USMC. These distinguished speakers gave us great insight as to how we should develop and solidify our moral beliefs in order to be ready for the Fleet and the Marine Corps. Under the guidance of Chaplain Alexander, and Chaplain Dickens, the leadership team consisting of 1/C Lewis Im (Pres.), 2/C Brandr Beekman-Ellner (Vice-Pres.), 2/C Luke Im (Treasurer), and 2/C Tom Dill (Secretary) have provided great leadership for the Protestant Midshipmen Club.

Campus Crusaders for Christ

We are midshipmen at the United States Naval Academy who serve our great nation but above all else serve our awesome God. We are committed to constantly seeking the face of God and giving him the glory for all that we accomplish. Our ambition for life is to know and follow hard after our Lord, as He leads us in all that we do. We are all very differnt people, even though we are all Midshipmen. Yet we share a strong common bond. We love Jesus Christ and we are obsesed with growing and living in the Lord.

Jewish Midshipmen Club

The USNA Jewish Midshipmen Club's primary mission is to extend Judaism from the synagogue to everyday life for the Jewish Midshipmen in the Brigade. Its members come together for important holidays such as Passover, Yom Kippur, and Rosh Hashanh as well as every Friday night to worship in the All-Faiths Chapel. JMC also meets on Tuesday nights in Mitscher Hall for pizza and religious discussion.

Navigators

The Navigators at the Naval Academy is part of a worldwide ministry committed to knowing Jesus Christ and making Him known. We are about exploring the love of God with those who do not yet know Christ, building leaders of true character, impacting this generation, and changing the world ... one person at a time. Authentic friendships, depth in study of the Scriptures, developing Biblical convictions, personal mentoring, training to minister to others, and growth in Christ-like character are all part of the discipleship adventure. So, if the Great Commandment, to love God wholeheartedly, and the Great Commission, to make disciples of all nations, are on your heart, please pray about making The Navigators your spiritual home during your years at the Naval Academy.

Midshipmen Black Studies Club

Our mission as the Midshipmen Black Studies Club is to educate the Brigade of Midshipmen about the history and cultue of African Americans in order to instill cultural awareness and a sense of pride among all Midshipmen. Also, we seek to educate Midshipmen about their heritage, serve the African American Community and recreate culturally.

Midshipmen Action Group

The Midshipmen Action Group was established in 1992 as a community relations program, organized and maintained by the Brigade of Midshipmen. Working with community partners, MAG coordinates voluntary projects making possible the opportunity for midshipmen to offer their time, talent and energy to a variety of educational, environmental and social service activities.

2004

The officers of the Class of 2004 have worked diligently over the past four years in order to promote the cohesion and spirit of the class. Class Officers organize various traditional Academy events, conduct fund-raising, represent and adhere to any decisions that pertain to the class as a whole.

2005

The Class of 2005 is ready to take over the Brigade and hopes to make it the most rewarding year for all classes. Ring Dance was a great success thanks to them and the ring dance committee.

Team Bill

Team Bill is a Brigade Support Activity that cares for the Naval Academy goats and represents the Naval Academy at sporting events, naval ceremonies, and other events in the Annapolis area. Midshipmen are selected for the team at the beginning of their youngster year by means of an interview process and soon afterward are indoctrinated into the team through a ceremonial cleaning of the goats. Team Bill is a proud tradition of the Naval Academy and hopes to continue this tradition well into the 21st century.

Color Guard

The Naval Academy Color Guard is composed of dedicated Midshipmen responsible for presenting the colors at many Academy functions. They are present at all parades, noon meal formations, home football games, the Army-Navy game, community service activities, and collegiate drill meets. They bear the American flag, the Brigade of Midshipmen flag, and the battle colors of the United States Marine Corps and the United States Navy.

Silent Drill Team

The United States Naval Academy Silent Drill Team, "The Commandant's Own," was established in September of 1990 by a group of midshipmen. The Jolly Rogers' missions include performing at various Naval Academy sporting events and official ceremonies.

They compete at invitational drill meets around the nation and represent the Naval Academy and the United States Navy in a wide variety of public appearances, to include local dress parades, and other special performances as dictated by the Commandant of Midshipmen.

In recent years the 'Jolly Rogers' have performed at Disney's Epcot Center in Orlando, FL, the Fiesta Flambeau Parade in San Antonio, TX, Mardi Gras in New Orleans' French Quarter, Sea and Sky Airshow, Jacksonville, FL and many other special occasions by invitation.

International Ball Committee

The International Ball serves to recognize and honor the Naval Academy's international students, international officers and their spouses. Additionally it is the goal of the International Ball to promote international awareness among our future Naval and Marine Corps officers. The International Ball provides an excellent opportunity for the midshipmen to use their foreign language abilities and to be acquainted with the traditions and etiquette of a formal ball. The guests include various diplomats, international students, and au pairs along with various international naval attaches.

Alpine Ski Team

The Naval Academy Alpine Ski Team is an organization that offers midshpmen interested in skiing a chance to travel to nearby ski slopes and compete in a variety of alpine races. The team also helps midshipmen improve their skiing skills and abilities.

Ultimate Frisbee

USNA Ultimate is currently an active ECA at the United States Naval Academy. We are on our way to once again becoming a club sport. USNA Ultimate is not a new team. We have been around since the late 1980s. At that time we were a club sport and were a nationally ranked team on a year to year basis. Hopefully, once we return to club status we can compete once again on a similar level. USNA Ultimate consists of members of the brigade of midshipmen from all classes, races, and genders. Any member of the Brigade is encouraged to come out and give it a shot, regardless of playing level.

Ring and Crest Committee

The Ring and Crest Committee is comprised of one member of each class. Their job is to work with the ring and crest design companies in order to achieve a crest worthy of representing their class ideas and mottos.

Cannoneers

The USNA Cannoneers are a Brigade support activity that promotes the spirit of the Brigade at football games. From the march-on of the Brigade until the final seconds of the game, the cannoneers are ready to fire their various cannons. During the games they fire a Dalghren model 1863 Boat Howitzer for touchdowns, halftime, and the end of the game. They also fire a smaller cannon for extra points, field goals, and at the end of the first and third quarters. The cannoneers are a little known, but important part of the Brigade spirit.

Scuba Club

The Mission of the USNA Scuba Club is to bring the exciting recreational sport of Scuba diving to the rest of the Brigade of Midshipman. Serving in the Navy, we naturally love the water and being scuba qualified helps us understand and appreciate this great resource that spans the seven major seas.

Mountaineering Club

We are the club dedicated to the enjoyment of the outdoors while building teamwork, leadership and camaraderie.

Judo Club

The Judo Club offers Midshipmen the opportunity to further the mental and physical development of Midshipmen through the practice of judo as a competitive sport and allows for the construction of the necessary nucleus and framework for a competitive team to represent the Naval Academy in local and intercollegiate competition. James Takemori, seventh degree black belt, instructs Navy Judo.The team practices four to five days each week in the Halsey DoJo.

Akido Club

Akido is believed to be one of the most spiritual of the martial arts. The physical side of Aikido involves throwing, joint manipulation and special weaponry training. Aikido does not focus on striking of one's opponent, but on using their energy to gain control. Aikido places its greatest emphasis on the motion and dynamics of movement and the control of one's Ki (energy or spirit within the body). Aikido itself has many different styles and many of those styles consider themselves to be a non-competitive art.

WRNV

WRNV 89.7 FM is the US Naval Academy's student run radio station. Midshipmen run and organize all aspects of operation. We are dedicated to bringing you great non-stop music. DJs shows run through the day and we bring you great music without commercials. You can tune into WRNV on 89.7 on your radio or by listening on NADN TV. As a Brigade support activity, we also provide music services for a variety of Academy events. We are available for including dances, picnics, and tailgate parties. The station also provides music at all home football games and various other home sports. This year we will also be broadcasting Navy Sports live from the game. Don't forget to tune in so you can follow your favorite Navy teams.

Amateur Radio Club

The Amateur Radio Club, W3ADO, at the Naval Academy is the oldest ECA, founded in 1928, before the FCC even began regulating the Electromagnetic Spectrum. At that point, it required all individual radio operators to get a license and demonstrate profeciency in the radio art. It has been in continuous operation ever since. No other ECA offers as much to the professional carrer of a Naval Officer, or Communications Officer or Combat System Engineer.

Yard Patrol Squadron

The Yard Patrol Craft Power Squadron is the Naval Academy's most professionally enriching ECA on the yard. Every Tuesday and Thursday, midshipmen are given the opportunity to get underway onboard the YPs to have hands-on training in seamanship, navigation, naval tactics, communications, and standard procedures. This training provided onboard the YPs is an initial step towards achievement of the Officer of the Deck Qualification and ultimately Command at Sea. While a part of the YP Squadron, midshipmen can obtain their YP Commanding Officer Qualification, a requirement for assuming the role of Commanding Officer of a YP. Currently, there are only five midshipmen within the brigade with such a qualification. Each semester, the YP Squadron embarks upon three movement orders to various cities, including Philadelphia, PA, Norfolk, VA, Baltimore, MD, and Williamsburg, VA. While offering extra liberty for underclass midshipmen, movement orders also gave midshipmen the opportunity to run the show with little supervision from the safety officers onboard preparing them for the leadership challenges of the fleet.

Trident Brass

Trident Brass is the Midshipmen-only Jazz Band. This year the band performed during the International Ball, the annual St. Johns/USNA Croquet Tournament, King Hall for Wednesday formal dinners, Commissioning Week, and the Pajama Game Winter Musical.

The Flying Squadron consists of two parts: the Flying Squadron, which is open to all midshipmen interested in aviation, and the Flying Team, which competes on the intercollegiate level both regionally and nationally against universities such as Embry-Riddle and the U.S. Air Force Academy. The Flying Team won their region the last two years as well as placing ninth overall at Nationals and earned the Most Improved School in the Nation award. In addition to the Flying Team and Flying Squadron, the Academy has the Initial Flight Syllabus (IFS) program for first-class midshipmen who are selected for aviation to get hours before flight school.

Additionally, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration annually sends representatives to share project updates and to instruct students in cuba diving and restoration procedures. As an organization, the Oceanography Club is dedicated to research, education, recreation and operational applications of the earth sciences.

Joy Bright Hancock Organization

Historians have paid scant attention to the role of women in the American military. Today, women are an integral part of the armed forces; in the Navy, for instance, they attend the Naval Academy at Annapolis, serve aboard ships, fly aircraft and rise to flag rank. Yet it has not always been so. Until after World War II the United States Navy had considered women's service as temporary or peripheral. When Congress passed legislation in 1948 allowing women permanent standing in the regular navy, it was largely because of the uniring efforts of one woman - Captain Joy Bright Hancock. Today women in the navy roughly make up sixteen percent of the fleet.

Chemistry Club

The Chemistry Club's mission is to boost the morale of the few, the proud, the chemistry majors. This year they hosted tailgaters, picnics, lunch pizza parties, tons of guest speakers, and even got a chance to meet a Nobel Prize winner. The club is also highly supported bye the Chmistry Department Staff.

SAE

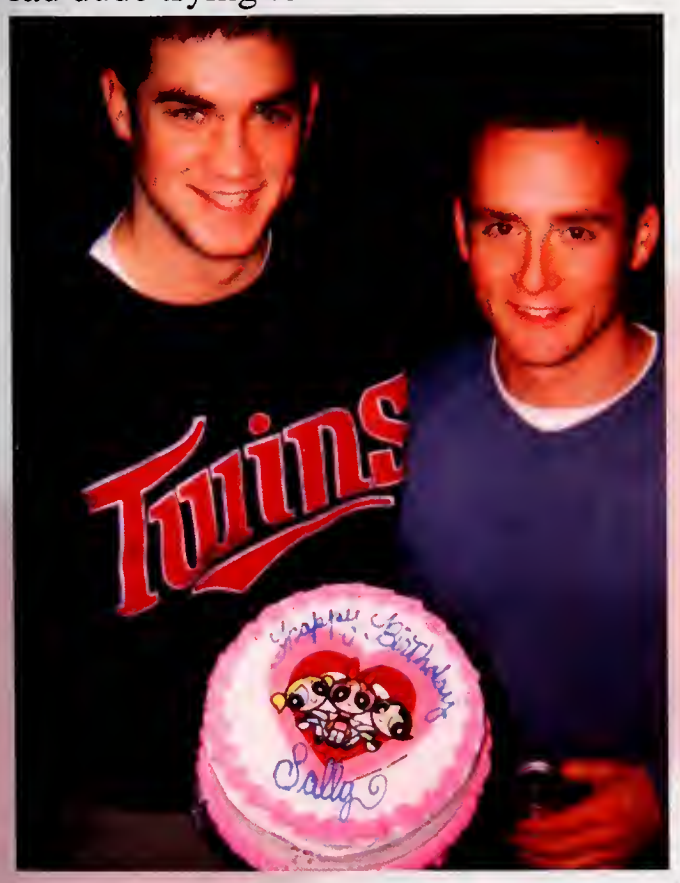
Andy Froistad

The man, the myth, the legend.

If you don't know who Andy Froistad is, you must not be a member of the Class of 2004. Our very own class secretary, three-time Halloween contest champion, baseball pitcher, and voted one of the top ten hottest midshipmen, Andy has left his mark on our class and on the entire Academy. His motivational emails got us through plebe year. His professionalism and dedication to being the best midshipman he could be has been an inspiration to us all. His love of family and country, especially his parents Tom and Claudia, reminds us all of what life is all about. In a world of total sweetness, he's just one rad dude trying to make a difference.



"Keep raising the bar of excellence with high uniform standards, rooms in Bravo Plus condition, knees parallel to the deck, and giving your shipmates positive Bravo Zulu's. ALL THE WAY TO HERNDON!!!!!"- FROI

It's your duty to do the duty.

I love Jimmy D.

With apologies to Gilbert and Sullivan's PIRATES of PENZANCE (or The Slave of Duty)

Opening Chorus:

Pour, O pour the pirate sherry;
Fill, O fill the pirate glass;
And, to make us more than merry
Let the pirate bumper pass.

For today our pirate 'prentice
Rises from indentures freed;
Strong his arm, and keen his scent is
He's a pirate now indeed!

Here's good luck to all his ventures!
Ian's out of his indentures.

Two and twenty, now he's rising,
And alone he's fit to fly,
Which we're bent on signalizing
With unusual revelry.

Here's good luck to all his ventures!
Ian's out of his indentures.
Pour, O pour the pirate sherry;
Fill, O fill the pirate glass;

And, to make us more than merry
Let the pirate bumper pass.

Hey Sparky,
To say we love you and are so proud is such an understatement. All of your life, while you were dazzling us with your talents on the gridiron and hardwoods, you kept pushing yourself to be better. No one could demand more of you than you have asked of yourself and for this you are being rewarded. While your commissioning completes part of a long journey, the next and perhaps most challenging step sill lies ahead. Be assured that if you attack it with all the energy you can master, there is no limit to what you can accomplish.Your family, along with your country, is very proud of you. Just knowing that you and those like you are protecting our freedom will help us all sleep better at night. Congratulations to you. May you always have fair winds and following seas. The United States Naval Academy Parent's Club of New Jersey Congratulates our New Jersey Class of 2004 and wishes them Fair Winds and Following Seas!

Dear James,

We are so proud of your personal accomplishments. Our congratulations in pursuing your goals and achieving your dreams: to graduate from the U.S. Naval Academy, and become a member of the Naval Aviation Team:

Job well done to a soon-to-be NFO.

It has been an exciting, bumpy road at times, from High School, through a year at the U.S. Naval Academy Prep School, Plebe Year, three more years as upper classman, and here you are now a new Naval Officer ready to start the rest of your professional career.

These have been years of joy and great memories for all of us, but the future is now in your hands. May God continue blessing you, watching over you, and protecting you in all your endeavors.

Keep in mind that our pride for you is not only for what you have done and what you have accomplished, but more importantly for what you are and what you have become.

Ensign James O. Garcia

From here on you will remain being in our hearts, our thoughts, and our prayers as you move forward with your new goals, dreams, and professional development. Make the best of the excitement that awaits for you during this new phase where you can continue growing mentally and spiritually.

It is now time to soar like an eagle and fly with this new achieved freedom. Keep the flame of passion for life inside of you and never forget that you are now ready to serve God, Country, and to protect our liberty here and abroad.

Love,

Dad, Mom, and Erika

May the Lord bless you and keep you,
May the Lord make His face shine upon you,
And be gracious unto you
May the Lord lift up His countenance upon you,
And give you peace.
(Numbers 6:24-26)

My dear Hayley "Bug" as you get "underway" remember this prayer: "The Ship of Life"
Steer the ship of my life, Good Lord, to your quiet harbor, where I can be safe from teh storms of sin and conflict. Show me the course I should take. Renew in me the gift of wisdom so I can always see the right direction I should go. And give me the strength and the courage to choose the right course, even when the sea is rough and the waves are high; Knowing that, through all hardship and danger, in Your Name, I shall find comfort and peace.

You'll always be my little dancer.
I'm so proud of you!!
All my love,

Congratulations Son on an outstanding and memorable four years at the Academy. Cindy, Myself, Grandma, John, Carol, and Gene too, are all so proud of you for what you have accomplished. I've watched you grow from a little boy who showed overwhelming determination and focus, just to beat me in a game of Risk, to the young man you have become today. Well, don't let all of this go to your head, remember what Grandpa used to say, "Sometimes you're a pain in the butt!" (Remember that picture?) As your school years passed it was becoming pretty clear to us that you were someone who would need more later in life than the commute to the office with a latte' in your hand. Cindy and I have given you love, encouragement and advice to help you along, but be proud of yourself, Pat, because it was you and you alone who has made all this happen. You've shown Honor, Courage and Commitment, and now for you the sky IS the limit!

ENSIGN ISAAC JEROME VANHOOSE

Born July4th, you were destined to be a patriot. In 7th grade you came home from school declaring, "I want to be a Naval officer when I grow up!"

"Why Navy?" asked your Air Force veteran dad.

"Because I like Navy uniforms best!"

We laughed, saying it was a passing phase, but after our vacation to Annapolis that summer, your resolve erased our doubts, and throughout high school you never wavered from your goal. Then came Induction Day, and you said, "This is God's plan for my life."

For four incredible years, we have recalled your words while embracing Jeremiah 29:11, and we have witnessed God's faithfulness.

Now as you enter the fleet, we are so PROUD to call you Ensign, but we are even more PROUD to call you Son.

In your youth, you displayed a natural yet reluctant capacity for leadership and an extraordinary standard for excellence. You chose the United States Naval Academy because you sought the opportunity to test yourself against the "best of the best". Four semesters on Sup's List, Battalion XO, flight training and Naval Aviation is proof that you met the challenge and fulfilled your potential.

As parents, our greatest hope is that our children develop deep roots and strong wings. As you begin your own life you have proven that you are securely rooted in who you are and have acquired the wings to fly as high and as far as you desire. We are so very proud of you and your accomplishments. You are our "sonshine".

Love, Mom and Dad

Your accomplishments and dedication in everything that you do is an inspiration to all of us. May God bless you and keep you watchfully under his wings.

Best Wishes, Your Brother - Will

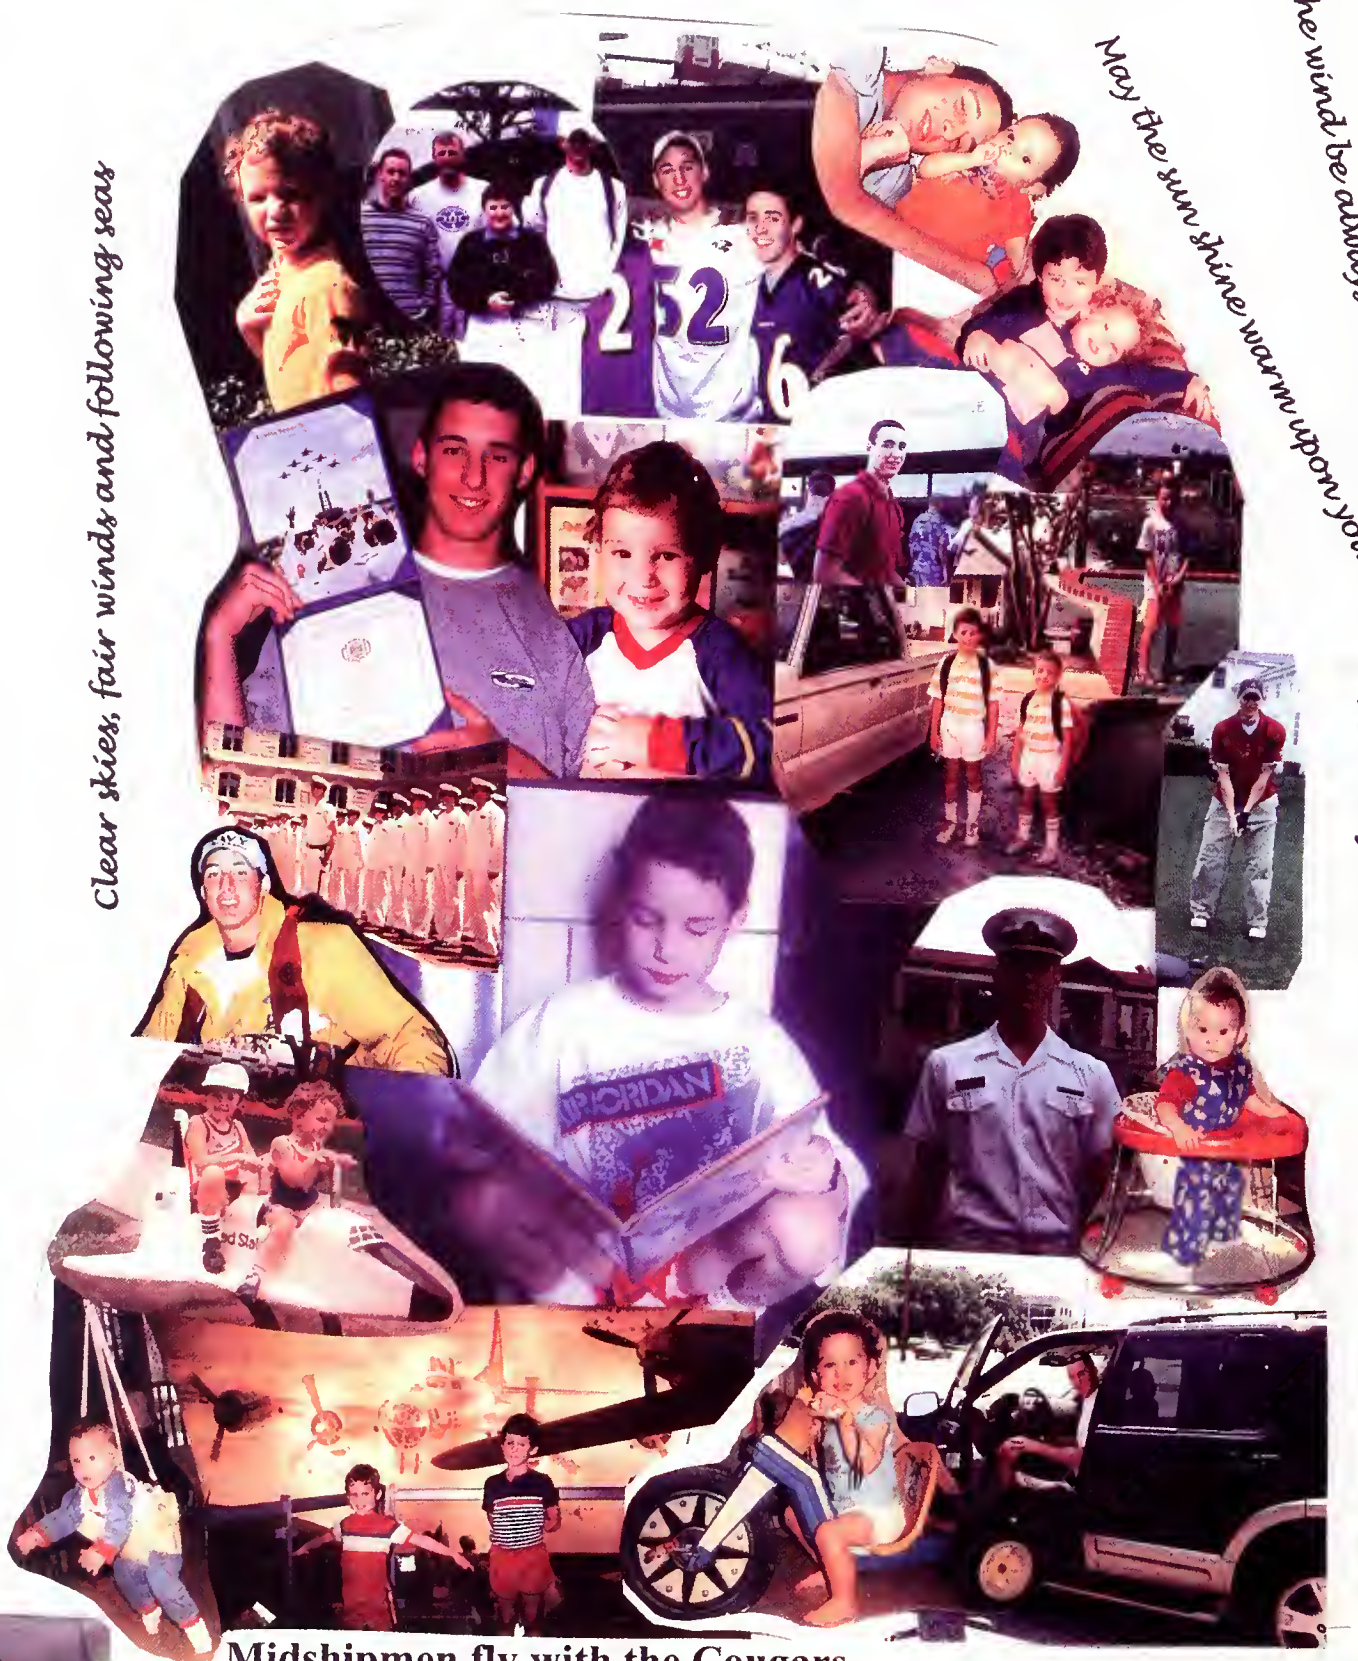
Dear Cory, We love you and we are so very proud of you. You have blessed us with your love, humor, talents and strength. Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "What lies behind us and what lies before us are tiny matters compared to what lies within us. With your fantastic enthusiasm, you are now off to Graduate school in Monterrey, CA, and then flight school. So to our wonderful son, brother, brother-in-law, and now uncle, we wish for you continued success with your goals and dreams, good health and happiness. Love you "C"! With all our enthusiasm & love for your always,

Mom, Dad, Scott, Rachel & Anthony (1)

Congratulations Cory! Rachel, myself and Anthony are so proud of all your accomplishments. I know growing up as my little brother had to be interesting for you (at least until you outgrew me by 5"). We definitely had our epic battles; the summer long 1-on-1 ban that Dad imposed sticks out in my mind. Yet we were always there for each other. I can not place a value on the bond and friendship we have shared growing up, through 2 academies, and now as JO's. You are a best friend and so much more. I am very impressed by all you have done. You even turned out to be a pretty good Uncle (We'll omit Rach's comments). The sky is the limit for you. Good luck as an ensign and don't worry A-Lew will keep your PSL warm for ya.

Clear skies, fair winds and following seas



May the sun shine warm upon your face...

Midshipmen fly with the Cougars

"The day is May 30, and my inaugural flight as a member of the VAQ-139 Cougars is about to begin. My name is Cory Maccumbee and I have been assigned to the Cougars as a part of my summer training at the United States Naval Academy. My flight crew consists of Pilot Lt. Mike Thompson, Lt.Cmdr. Brian Kulley and Lt. Shannon Callahan. I'm ready to get up in the air, and as the professionals conduct the pre-flight brief, I prepare myself for the flight by stockpiling airsickness bags. Thompson has expressed his desire to make good use of these as part of his collateral duties as Midshipman Liaison Officer. As I climb into the back seat of the EA-6B Prowler, I quickly realize my 6-foot, 5-inch frame is not quite suited for this aircraft. The scheduled flight for today is a low-level mission through the beautiful terrain of the North Cascades. After entering the route, we quickly descend to an altitude of 500 feet and accelerate to airspeed of over 400 knots. We maneuver over and around the terrain and the experience was truly unmatched in my lifetime. I was quite proud of my G-force tolerance until shortly after landing, when I put my airsickness bag to use. I had a great flight with the Cougars and this experience will definitely influence my future career decision."

Snakeman,

From the time you were young, and we were told you were and "old soul" we knew you were special and would go on to achieve great things in life. Your diligence and hard work have paid off, and your successes and accomplishments have far exceeded everyone's expectations. We are so pleased that when given the chance "to sit it out or dance" you chose to dance.

As you journey into the next phase of your life just remember how much we love you, and how very proud we are of you. You have proven time and again that "whatever you believe, you can achieve." Thank you for being such a great son, brother, and most importantly, a person of high morals and standards that has been a role model and inspiration to so many others.

From the time we left you at Alumni Hall and you walked away from us, until today, seemed at times like a lifetime, yet we blinked and it was over. You followed your dreams with determination and pride, sometimes tripping but never giving up. We are all very proud of you.

We want you to always remember that no matter where life takes you, whatever dreams you follow, and no matter how 'grown up' you become, you will always be our 'baby'! You will always have our respect and support. We love you very much and you will always fill our hearts with laughter and sunshine.

Cera, Future Chemist

Cera,

All of your life, you have been and individual - one who has found her own way apart from her peers - be it in fashion or activities or ideology. Even as a very young child, your "mind told your ideas" about things.

When the time came to choose a career path, you again followed the "road less taken" in both major (Chemistry) and Service Selection (USMC Pilot), and it has made "all the difference"!

We are so proud of you and love you with all our hearts,

And from above... Pop and Grandma

"I stepped out onto Stribling Walk and WOW!! I was too busy to notice at first, but as I walked to class, and looked around the site was something else. Hundreds of Mids, all dressed in working blues, walking to class. The sun was shining brightly through a clear sky. The sight took my breath away. I saw the Chapel Dome gleaming as if it as calling to me. I glanced at the river, right between Michelson and Chauvenet, the sun brightly reflecting off its surface as a big yacht sailed by. I cannot imagine anyone, anywhere experiencing a more beautiful first day of college. I really feel I am going to go far here."

¡Felicidades Ernesto!
¡Lograste graduarte de la Academia Naval de los Estados Unidos!

Eres perseverante en lograr tus metas. Todos tus reconocimientos hablan por ti.

Es interesante ver que aún de chiquito demonstraste de qué estás hecho: con tu primera fatiga militar (con botas) a los 6 años, el avioncito cojo de un ala y aquel otro que hiciste pinches de ropa (ambos están por ahí todavía), y tu diligencia en "little league" de beísbol y en el equipo de la Ponce High allá con Martínez. Todas tus empresas (hasta las más sencillas) han sido firme testigo de tu carácter de líder, tu valentía y tu buen corazón. Tito, definitivamente naciste para la tecnología aeroespacial. El reto que representa investigar e indagar sobre esta rama de la ingeniería es tuyo. Tomarás parte del futuro de este ahora tu campo para así recorrer el firmamento y descubrir el espacio en sus misterios y sus bellezas - logrando mayores y mejores conocimientos. Te felicitamos por los logros obtenidos de tu sacrificio y dedicación al estudio y al trabajo. Mas te deseamos lo mejor en los retos que te esperan en esta nueva etapa. Nosotros tus padres, Nayda y Ernesto, junto a tus hermanas, Naydita y Nadya, ¡te queremos mucho y estamos orgullosos de ti!

Que el Señor nuestro Dios te bendiga y te sature de su sabiduría y amor. ¡Sigue siempre adelante que vamos a ti! ¡Mucho éxito!

You have been a joy to have as a son, brother and grandson. So many people love you and want the best for you. As you turn this corner in your life, take with you Christ's love. Remember that his love endures all things. It will give you strength in weary times, and tears of joy in good times.
It has been four years of great pride for our family. As you become an officer and leader of men serving our country, we will continue to carry that pride.
For all you've achieved, and for all you plan to do...

Clay,
Congratulations! We are very proud of your integrity, enthusiasm, and diligence in pursuing your goals. When you are "in the arena," remember that your family admires your willingness to be challenged, and supports your efforts.

Love,
Mom, Dad, Andy

It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood, who strives valiantly; who errs and comes short again and again; because there is not effort without error and shortcomings; but who does actually strive to do the deed; who knows the great enthusiasm, the great devotion, who spends himself in a worthy cause, who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement and who at the worst, if he fails, at least he fails while daring greatly. So that his place shall never be with those cold and timid sould who know neither victory nor defeat.

Speech given April 23, 1910

We are so proud of you for your academic and athletic performances while at the Academy. There is no better evidence of your leadership strengths than selection by your Women's Soccer Team to serve as its Captain this past season. We congratulate you on that, on your outstanding performance on the soccer field, including being named MVP at this year's Patriot League post-season women's soccer tournament and on the resourcefulness and courage you displayed in coming back from a serious field injury during your plebe year. Michael Thomas

Even when you were young, you already had Navy blue blood running through your veins! The fourth grade visit to the Naval Academy sparked and interest in your mind that only intensified after boy's State in high school. It is hard to believe that it has been six years since we cosigned for your enlistment to enter the Navy's Nuclear Power program. Then, two years later came the exciting news that you would attain your dream of entering the United States Naval Academy and it has surely been a whirlwind of activity since June 2000. You have made us all so proud and we stand in awe of your ability to set goals and dreams and keep reaching out until they are yours for the taking. Now, you will enter a whole new episode in your life. Another dream is out there for you to work towards, being a Navy pilot. We don't doubt that you will give it your all and proudly represent your nation as an officer in the United States Navy. Never forget where you came from or who your friends are—you have truly forged some of the best relationships anyone could asd for and you will have them for life. Keep that wonderful zest for life, have some great fun, and continue to work hard to attain those dreams. We love you very much and will be keeping southwest airlines in business for the next few years!

Love, Mom, Dad, Zack

Colin Thornton

Colin,
Your level of commitment and integrity will always be MY inspiration. Those of us who are here, and those who have left us behind, are so very proud of you. These 21 years have flown by so quickly, but you have filled them with one astonishing accomplishment and joy after another. You have endowed me with my raison d'etre and I thank you. I thought these words revealed the character of the fine young man you have become.

I'd rather be the ship that sails and rides the billows wild and free
Than to be the ship that always fails to leave its port and go to sea.
I'd rather feel the sting of strife, where gales are born and tempests roar;
Than to settle down to useless life and rot in dry dock on the shore.
I'd rather fights some mighty wave with honor and supreme command
And fill at last a well-earned grave than to die in ease upon the sand.
I'd rather drive where storms may blow, and be the ship that sometimes failed
To make the ports where it would go than to be the ship that never sailed.

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you,
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you
But make allowance for their doubting too,

If you can dream...and not make dreams your master,
If you can think...and not make thoughts your aim,
If you can meet with triumph and disaster
And treat those two imposters just the same

If you can search for truth and never waiver,
Nor compromise yourself when all is done,
If you can live your life for good of others
Then which is more,
"You've become a MAN...my SON."

Wishing you a bright future and a life of fulfillment and happiness.

It's hard to argue with this kind of logic.

It is a sophisticated blend of raw power and advanced technology. This combination enables a carrier to project its stabilizing influence anywhere in the world. Northrop Grumman Newport News designs, builds and maintains these complex, vital ships for the U.S. Navy. We're currently working on CVN 77, the latest Nimitz-class carrier, integrating sophisticated warfare systems that will improve performance and reduce lifecycle costs. And with an eye to the future, we're developing even more innovative and efficient technologies for the next generation of carriers — CVN 21. Northrop Grumman. We're turning knowledge into power.

Overview

The 2004 Lucky Bag is the 111th edition of this annual. It is the seventh edition to be produced completely digitally. It was created by dedicated members of the Brigade of Midshipmen. The book was printed in Texas by the Taylor Publishing Company of Dallas. Our sales representative was Julia Jordan of Baltimore, Maryland. Our production manager at Taylor was Tami McConnell. The Lucky Bag is 1024 pages, is comprised of two volumes, and is presently the largest yearbook made by Taylor. It has a press run of over 4500 copies with 65 presentation copies. Each Lucky Bag was bundled with one DVD. Members of the Class of 2004 were each given a directory book containing formal pictures and contact information of all members in the class.

Printing

The Lucky Bag was printed at 155 LPI on premium 100 lb matte paper.

Typography

All of the headings in the book used Apple Chancery and Brush Script fonts. All text in the body and caption areas used Times New Roman.

Photography

Formal portraits were taken by Davor Studios of Bensalem, Pennsylvania. Our Davor representative was James Rainey. Davor supplied film and camera equipment. Primarily, Fujicolor supera 100, 200, 400, 800, and 1600 speed film was used. The Lucky Bag maintained a cache of lenses and camera bodies to include Canon EOS-1v HS, Canon EOS Elan 7E's, Nikon N70's, and Nikon N90's. Our lenses included Canon EF 17-35 mm and 28-135mm f/3.5-5.6 IS USM and Nikon Kens 80-200mm. All film was developed and scanned into 17 MB Tiff image files and placed on CD-ROM. Some photos were taken by members of the USNA Photo Lab, Phil Hoffman of NAAA, and Mike Engleman and Jim Rainey of Davor Photography.

Computers

The Lucky Bag office contains eight Apple Mac computers. Four are Power Mac G4 Dual 500 Mhz models with 256 MB of RAM. 40 GBs of hard drive space and a CD-R drive. One is a Power Mac 750 Mhz model with 256 MB of RAM, 40 Gbs of hard drive space and a CD-R drive. One is a Power Mac G4 running at 800 Mhz with 1250 MB of RAM and two 80 GB hard drives. This computer also contains the Apple Superdrive, which is capable if recording DV-Rs. These computers were connected to 22" DELL monitors. The backbone of the office is a Power Mac G4 server running Appleshare IP v6.3. This computer also has two 40 GB SCSI hard drives which contain all the files and pictures used in this book. Scanning of photos submitted by the Brigade was done on UMAX PowerLook 1100 scanners.

Software

All of our Apple Power Mac computers run OS X or OS 9. Raster images were edited using Adobe Photoshop CS. Composites were saved in Encapsulated Postscript format (EPS) with vector data retained. These EPS images were placed in Adobe InDesign 2.0. Text and other elements were added as needed. They were packaged and shipped FedEx to Taylor for processing.

Advertisements

Commercial advertisements were obtained through Pentagon Publishing. Parent advertisements were solicited by the Lucky Bag.

Collier's Thoughts

CAPT Sandala – It has been a privilege to work with you for the past three years. As the editor-in-chief of the Lucky Bag I count myself as one of the privileged few that been able to really get to know you. I am thankful that you let me learn from my mistakes, of which there have been more than a few. It was nice to have someone that cared about the Lucky Bag in your position. I have always been impressed by how much effort and dedication you have given the Lucky Bag. Your support has been paramount in producing this wonderful book.

Julie — I am so thankful for all your support this year. I don't know if I could have done this without your help with the layouts and making sure that we had all of the deadlines set. I think we got a lot of good things started. I wish you continued luck in all your endeavors. We could not have done this book without you.

Jim and Patty — Thanks for all of your support over the years. It was really nice to have a place to call home. You brought me into your house and treated me like a son. I will never forget the lessons that you have taught me about life and love. I can't say enough good stuff about the two of you.

Harley and Sophie- We got to know each other so well. I will miss both of you and I look forward to seeing you both again. Thanks for the inspiration.

Holly—You really are a lifesaver on this book. It could not have been done without you. I am sorry that I had to leave you with so little experience, but I am impressed with the results and your dedication. I'll always be grateful to you. Thanks for being there for me.

Danny-- We have had some crazy times together over the course of these four years, but I have always been able to count on you. I know that you can produce. Whatever you have set your mind to you have fully accomplished. I'm glad that you chose the Lucky Bag as one of those things. Try and stay out of trouble because we both know how easily it finds you.

Scott—I am grateful for all the work that you put into the first book. You kept me on track during the planning phase. Danny and you did a great job collecting all of the bios. Thanks for the hard work at the end. Good luck out in the fleet.

Paul—I'm glad we had you taking the pictures this year. I am sure you will see more than a few in here taken by you, but I don't think you will see any of your shoe (if we did the editing correctly). Thanks for all the exciting times out on assignment. Good luck in the Marine Corps.

Adam—Thanks for contributing all of your knowledge to this year's book. I know how busy you were this year, and I'm glad you chose to spend some of your time with the Lucky Bag. It's always been fun. Good Luck.

Mike—You have a long, hard road ahead of you, but I know you are up to the challenge. I hope that I have given you enough insight so that you will be able to succeed where I have failed. I hope that you will accomplish everything you dream this year. I know that you have a good staff in the men and women that are left behind. Don't let all those great ideas you had go to waste. Thanks for all your input, and good luck.

Kendra—I was glad to hand the DVD over to someone that really cared about how it turned out. I can't wait to see how it turns out. You have had some amazing ideas for the DVD. Good Luck and call me if you need any help.

John—I appreciate all your hard work this year. You really stepped up to help out with a lot of different jobs that we needed filled, and you did a really good job at all of them. I offer one word of caution: don't try and overextend yourself too much. Don't forget to delegate and remember that you alone don't hold all the answers. Good luck. I'm looking for good things from you in the future. See you in the fleet good bud.

Troy, Grant, Lawrence, Luke, Abby, Nisa, Eve—thanks for all your hard work. I hope you'll stay involved in the coming years. We need people like you to carry on the tradition.

Kory—I know you were busy this year trying to plan a wedding, but I appreciate all your work on gathering materials for the book. I think you'll like how the section turned out.

Jessica-- I know you guys were busy this year trying to keep the brigade running, but I appreciate you taking the time to make the sports section top notch. You gathered a lot of the materials that helped us create such a dynamic book.

Joe—This cover is your masterpiece. Thanks for agreeing to draw it and use my concept in your drawing. You have an amazing talent, don't let it go to waste.

Jed—You kept me sane throughout this entire academy experience. I appreciate your candor and your friendship. But most of all you put the Luck in this years Lucky Bag because you are the luckiest guy in the world. I know everything is going to turn out alright for you, just keep us peons in your mind when you really make it big.

I would especially like to thanks Bennett Christman, John Augusto, and Julia Feys for their support, vision, and guidance. I learned everything I know from them.

Holly's Thoughts

I'm sitting here up in the Lucky Bag office, where I have spent most of my time for the past five months, trying to figure out what I want to say to sum up my Lucky Bag experience. It's not as easy as I thought it would be. By the time I graduated and came here for my first day as a TAD Ensign, I had known for a long time that I would be in charge of getting this book to print. However, I did not realize that all 1024 pages would be my responsibility. Some of the section editors did their jobs (Thanks Danny and Scot!), but most didn't even come close. I had hoped for some guidance from those midshipmen who had been on the staff for years. What I got was a few laughs, a few pats on the back, and a lot of "Good Luck's." So here I am writing the last page of the 2004 Lucky Bag to be completed, the last of the 1024 pages that I was privileged enough to work on. I won't deny that there was some extreme bitterness felt by this year's summer staff, especially by me, John, and Dom—the last three. It was left to us the clean up the mess left by everyone who came before us. After changing layouts, pictures, captions, colors, and pretty much everything but the cover, we were the only ones who had any idea what the book looked like when it went to the publisher. I do hope that everyone is pleased with the final product. If there are people who are unhappy with it, I invite each and every one of you to walk up the Rotunda stairs and devote some time to the 2005 Lucky Bag. Maybe you'll learn something. One thing I learned doing this job is that no one cares about the Lucky Bag until it comes out. If there aren't any pictures of you in the Lucky Bag, it's because you didn't respond to any of the hundreds of requests we made for candid pictures. Also, I think that all parents should understand that the Lucky Bag is not their yearbook, it is their mid's yearbook. They should remind themselves of this fact before sending multiple emails and making multiple phone calls inquiring about the delivery date of the yearbook or whether the parent ad materials that they sent in two months late got into the book. If your mid hasn't received his yearbook and neither have his friends, chances are it hasn't been finished yet. Be patient. We are not professionals up here. This year we had probably one of the most inexperienced summer staffs in history and we worked a little slower as we made things up as we went. All that being said, I am glad that Lucky Bag was my TAD. I learned more than I ever wanted to know about publishing a book and I got to work with some great people (Thanks Julie and Jim!). More importantly, I left my mark on the Naval Academy. Twenty years from now the staff of the 2024 Lucky Bag might look at our book for inspiration just as I looked through old books time and time again.

In closing, I would like to thank all of the people who made the past four years the most memorable of my life. Brenna- You were the roommate I hoped for and everyday would have been a lot more boring if you hadn't been here. Erin- We had our ups and downs, but we were able to stick together all four years. Thanks for being there whenever I needed someone to talk to. Jimmy-You really are my soulmate...too bad I think of you as the older brother I never had. You are one of my best friends and were always there to make me feel like the greatest girl in the world. Jeff- You'll always be one of my favorite neighbors. I already miss your frequent visits. Don't forget all of us when you make it to the top. Don't ever change!!! Mason- Everything happens for a reason. My wish for you is that you become the man you are capable of being. Andy- Our time together was brief, but memorable. You are one of the greatest human beings I have ever met. Keep in touch! Jess, J-Lo, Mo, Jules, Beth, Jimbo, Mike, Mikey, Brian, Matt, Joshua, Danny, Erin J, Leigh, Mank, Margaret, Chris, the softball team, 8th Company, Mom, Dad, Brooke, and all the people that I am forgetting, THANK YOU for being a part of my life. I love you all!!!!

Holly would like to personally thank the following people:

Julie Jordan: I had so many things to learn when I started and you were patient enough to teach me. This book could not have been completed without you. Thank you so much for all of your expertise, understanding, the late nights, lunches and dinners.

Tami McConnell: I know we caused more than a few headaches for you. You were so flexible and understanding everytime we missed a deadline or did something wrong. This book is a credit to the hard work and dedication of you and the entire Taylor staff.

Jim Rainey: You were always there in a jam. There would be no pictures in this book if it weren't for you. It has been a pleasure getting to know you and Patty.

Collier C. Crouch: I know you did the best you could. You had a great vision for this book. I hope the final product resembles what you had in mind. It was an honor for me to create this year's Lucky Bag and I owe the opportunity to you.

Danny Soria: Although you did not pass on much of your Photoshop and InDesign knowledge, you did help me with the basics and you were always on the other end of the phone laughing at me when I called for help. Seriously though, I know you did as much as you could and set us up really well for the Firstie Bios. I can't imagine how suicidal I would have been if I had to do all of the scanning. See you in VA!!!!

Scot Foster: You worked hard on this book throughout the year. I hope that you are satisfied with what we came up with. Thanks for helping me with my questions whenever you were in from the field.

John Rodenburg: You do more for the Lucky Bag than I think anyone realizes. From photos to checks to cleaning to manual labor, you're a one-person staff. Everytime I asked for anything it was done, sometimes before I asked. I am anxious to see what masterpiece is produced when you have the official Editor-in-Chief title.

Domenico Monaco: My partner in crime, the last one standing. I couldn't have gotten through the last few months without you in the office with me. Everyday I looked forward to your stories. Maybe someday they'll build more elevators in Bancroft and the Dahlgren ladies will learn what "no lettuce" means. I leave this book in your capable hands.

Holly, Dom, and John would like to thank the creators and stars of Alias, The Blue Collar Comedy Tour, and practically every DVD known to man. Addictinggames.com and Yahoo!Games also deserve recognition for keeping us sane throughout the long, un-air-conditioned hours.

Dear Friends,

It has been an honor and a privilege to spend four years on the staff of the Lucky Bag. From my first introduction to the Bag, I was astounded at the size and depth of the publication and the organization that it represents. I have learned much from all of my responsibilities in the organization, and from the people inside of it. The sheer dedication of all the members is my most vivid recollection.

Throughout the four years, I have been privileged not only to step inside the history of the Naval Academy from 1845 to 2004, but I have also been able to weave together an understanding of what it means to people to have graduated from the Naval Academy. In the course of my term as editor-in-chief, I was privileged to meet many old graduates from the Naval Academy whom had long since retired from the Navy. It was through these gentlemen that I was able to understand the importance of the Lucky Bag and of the Naval Academy in general.

The Lucky Bag is not just another yearbook. It was the first yearbook published in the United States. This tradition, along with that of the class ring, has been passed to many other facets of our life, from universities to sports teams. Their purpose is to remind us of the bonds that we share and the burden that we have chosen to undertake. This book is but a symbol of four years by the bay, but when the sunshine of your youth fades away it will be a reminder of the trials and tribulations, the joy and elation, and the journey that is the Naval Academy.

This is a necessary journey, for sacrifice is what keeps our country strong. I am proud to say that I graduated with each and every one of you because I know that the one thing that will keep this country strong is the bonds and alliances that we have formed through surviving the dark ages together. Welcome to the extended brigade.

Good Luck and God's speed in your journey.

Collier C. Crouch
